Tanks Crack Moscow Line But Cannon Fire Pointblank Halts Rush

Soviet Admits Loss Of Stalino; Claims Its Capture Cost Foe 50,000 Men

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, Russia, Oct. 26.—Soviet big guns firing pointblank at charging German tank columns have checked a new Nazi penetration of Red army defenses southwest of Moscow, frontline dispatches reported tonight.

These artillery behemoths were declared literally blasting to a pulp the roads over which the Germans thrust their salient. After repeated assaults the Germans failed to achieve a break-through, the dispatches said.

With this support, the Soviet troops were said to have been able to establish a new defense line a short distance behind their previous positions in the Maloyaroslavets sector 65 miles southwest of Moscow.

Holding Other Roads

On the other two main roads to Moscow—Kalinin 95 miles to the northwest and Mozhaisk 57 miles west—the Russians said their fighters were holding their own in street fighting and with a mobile defense in fields and forests.

Unending struggles were reported writhing back and forth over wooded terrain. Rain and snow falling alternately is making it difficult for both sides to bring up reserves and Soviet war correspondents said this has helped slow the German advance.

Bayonet fighting raged on in Kalinin. Streets were reported changing hands repeatedly. In one day the Russians said, Hitler's forces lost 4000 men, 34 field guns and 190 trucks there.

A Soviet tank unit, dispatches from this front related, attacked a miles-long German column, crushed 38 tanks and 107 motor vehicles and then penetrated Kalinin, routing Germans who had occupied the inner city.

Loss of Stalino Admitted

The early Monday morning Moscow communique said reinforced German attacks on the capital's defenses were hurled back with heavy Nazi losses Sunday. The official announcement acknowledged the abandonment of Stalino, Donets Basin industrial center, after several days of violent fighting in which

Germans Report Wide Breach Made; Planes Batter Route Of American Aid

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 26.—German panzer and infantry divisions have broken Russian resistance "on a broad front" on the sector before Moscow, the news agency D. N. B. stated tonight, after fierce fighting which included a number of surprise Nazi attacks.

The agency failed to state exactly where the action occurred, describing the location simply as being in the middle sector of the Eastern Front. Surprise attacks enabled the Germans to seize a number of fortifications, D. N. B. said, while others were taken only after heavy fighting.

The Russians, in an attempt to check the advancing Germans, were supported by strong artillery fire, the report said. In a battle on this sector Friday the Germans took 4000 prisoners, ten tanks and 18 guns, and destroyed another 13 Russian tanks on the following day, according to D. N. B.

Reds Counterattack

Dispatches from other points on the Eastern Front reported a number of stubborn Soviet counterattacks which led to bloody fighting and finally resulted in Red army forces being thrown back.

North of the Ukrainian industrial area, one dispatch said, 1700 Russian prisoners were taken yesterday.

Bomb destruction of parts of Russia's Murmansk railroad claimed today by the German high command indicated the Germans were taking precautions against British and American aid moving into Russia via the Arctic Sea route.

Press speculation indicated, however, it was the German conviction that it was next to impossible to deliver assistance to Russia swiftly enough to be decisive in the great military operations now apparently reaching a climax.

(The main railway line to Moscow from the Arctic is from the ice-free port of Murmansk. German commentators apparently failed to take into consideration the possibility that Soviet icebreakers might keep open a White Sea channel to Archangel, another possible port of entry for American and British aid, 200 miles east of the main line.)

The whole front was described as still in a "fluid condition" everywhere except immediately around Leningrad.

Senate Opens Neutrality Act Debate Today

The long-brewing Senate floor fight over revision of the Neutrality Act breaks today over a Foreign Relations Committee report urging reestablishment of freedom of the seas as a guiding doctrine of the Nation's foreign policy.

"No nation is secure" in the face of the Nazi threat of world conquest which has brought "death, destruction and terrorism," said the report of the Foreign Relations majority, made public yesterday. It urged repeal of Sections 2, 3 and 6 of the law, to permit arming of merchant ships against belligerent raiders and to authorize the vessels to pass through combat zones and deliver American munitions in the ports of countries fighting the Axis ports of countries fighting the Axis.

The report was adopted by a 13-to-10 vote in the Foreign Relations group.

"The aggressors are struggling to obtain control of the high seas," the report continued, "as part of their plan of conquest of continents. If they should gain control of the seas, the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere would be immediately and most seriously threatened."

The committee majority held that the United States is inconsistent in pledging full aid to the embattled democracies and then adhering to restrictions which "stand directly in the way of carrying out this aid policy"—a point raised by President

32 Trapped As Vehicle Hits Bridge

Machine Stands Upright on Nose; Eight Extricated, All Seriously Hurt

By the Associated Press

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 26.—Twenty-two persons were burned to death and 8 others injured, some seriously, 4 miles south of here tonight when a Montgomery-Birmingham bus struck a bridge and caught fire.

Night policeman B. R. Plyler said the victims were trapped when the bus was left standing up on its front end after the crash.

Plyler said 32 persons were aboard the bus, but was unable to account for 2.

The bus, a Birmingham local, left Montgomery at 8:30 p. m., and had made approximately 40 miles of its 100-mile trip.

Driver in Hospital

Plyler said one of those brought to the hospital here was the bus driver, whose name he did not know.

The hospital gave out the following list of injured brought here:

Ralph Scroggins, Birmingham, arm and ear injuries; William Penn, Troy, undetermined; Chris Chrumply, Enterprise, severe burns on feet; unidentified driver of the bus, critical burns; Otis Lunsford, Westville, Fla., severe burns; Sam Terry, undetermined; Nadine Jerry, undetermined, and Robert Taylor, undetermined.

George Easterly, passenger in a car which was following the bus, said it struck a concrete railing on the bridge, and "fire ran all over it in a few seconds.

"We could see the passengers running and screaming as the fire spread. It was all over in a few minutes."

Police believed the rear end of the bus struck the railing, exploding the gasoline tank and throwing the flaming liquid over the passengers.

Missouri Bus Overturns Three Times, 36 Hurt

Joplin, Mo., Oct. 26 (INS).—Thirty-six persons were injured today when a bus loaded with 60 passengers failed to take a curve and overturned three times near Neosho, Mo.

None of the injured was critically hurt and most of the injuries were confined to cuts and bruises. Soft mud into which the bus rolled was believed to have prevented more serious injuries.

Roosevelt Plea Ushers In Navy Day

Calls for Personal Sacrifice to Build An Unconquerable And United Nation

A call for personal sacrifice in the interest of a "united and unconquerable" America was issued last night by President Roosevelt, ushering in today's twentieth annual celebration of Navy Day, Nation-wide salute to the United States sea power.

The call was made in a letter addressed to Secretary Knox and made public by the Navy Department, which has arranged for scores of naval shore demonstrations throughout the country, with probably the most spectacular scheduled for Fairlawn Park in Washington.

The demonstration, which will run from 8:30 a. m. to 5:15 p. m., will include about 20 different types of aviation and military exhibitions, climaxed by the city's first glimpse of parachute troops in action. Marine Corps paratroops from Quantico will do the jumping at 4 p. m.

President Speaks Tonight

Ceremonies at the John Paul Jones statue are to be led by the Military Order of the World War at 12:15 p. m., while a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, with President Roosevelt as speaker, will culminate the local observance. His address will be broadcast by all networks on a program beginning at 10 p. m.

The President is expected to answer many questions on foreign policy and bring the country up to date on developments since his radio speech on September 11, in which he revealed that "shoot on sight" orders had been given to the Navy.

Donovan to Preside

Features of the naval demonstration will be the catapulting of planes at 9 a. m. and again at noon; a half hour of tactical flying exhibition by Marine planes at 9:40 a. m.; the arrival of "King Neptune" and his court at 1 p. m., and a sham battle, complete with dive-bombers, landing operations and para-

Second Appeal

By William V. Nessly.

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night told John L. Lewis that "in this crisis of our national life there must be uninterrupted production of coal for making steel," and called on Lewis and his associates "as loyal citizens" to end the strike of 53,000 workers in "captive" mines supplying the steel companies.

In a letter to Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, Mr. Roosevelt replied to the union head's flat rejection on Saturday of a previous Presidential appeal that he order the miners to continue work pending settlement of the controversy over granting a union shop in the "captive" mines. The union already had agreed to a 30-day extension of operations under a temporary arrangement while the Defense Mediation Board endeavored to bring about a settlement.

Second Appeal

When the board last week, with the 30-day period ending Saturday night, reported to the President that it was unable to make a recommendation in the union shop issue, Mr. Roosevelt addressed Lewis on Friday, asking him to grant another extension of the temporary agreement. Lewis replied on Saturday, attacking the Mediation Board's "casual and lackadaisical" treatment of the dispute and declining to order the men to continue work after last Saturday night.

Yesterday the President dispatched the following letter to the mine union executive:

"Dear Mr. Lewis:

"I acknowledge your letter of yesterday. You say that you do not feel warranted in recommending an additional extension of the temporary agreement to keep the captive mines in operation pending a final settlement of the controversy. I must ask you to reconsider this decision.

"In this crisis of our national life there must be uninterrupted production of coal for making steel, that basic material of our national defense. That is essential to the preservation of our freedoms, yours and mine; those freedoms upon which the very existence of the United Mine Workers of America depends.

Mr. Myron Taylor is prepared to meet with you on Wednesday, to see if you and he in private and personal conference can work out a peaceful solution of the problem. You have agreed to confer with Mr. Taylor. During such conferences the production of coal for steel-making by the mine workers under the established wage scales of the Appalachian agreement should continue in the broad interest of the safety and defense of the Nation.

"I am, therefore, as President of the United States, asking you

First Lady Hits Wage Control As 'Involuntary Bondage'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight that wage control seemed unfair and might be regarded as "involuntary bondage."

Declaring in a sponsored broadcast over an NBC network that while prices were rising, hearings on the emergency price control bill were being held in "leisurely fashion," the President's wife said:

"There is naturally an appeal made, when prices are controlled, to control wages, but it seems unfair, on the whole. The Thirteenth Amendment . . . makes many people doubt whether doing so might not be in certain instances classed as involuntary bondage.

"It would seem better, perhaps, to protect the worker from a rising cost of living not only through control, and then appeal to his democratic patriotism for a voluntary stabilizing agreement, arrived at by the machinery instituted for collective bargaining."

To check inflation in the country, she recommended removing excess money by taxation or by selling defense bonds.

8 Hurt in Virginia Crash

D. C. Mother and Baby Killed, 17 Others Injured in Traffic

A Washington woman and her 10-month-old son were killed and six others injured in an automobile-truck smashup near South Hill, Va., the Associated Press reported yesterday as traffic mishaps in Washington and nearby Maryland claimed one life and injured 11 other persons.

Sadie Graves, 25, Negro, of 62 Patterson Street Northeast, and her 10-month-old son were killed, and her husband, Harvey Graves, was injured in the crash of their automobile into a parked truck on Route 1, near South Hill, about 175 miles from Washington.

Others injured were Banks Graves, Junior Graves, Lester Graves, Virginia Lee Graves and Tate Graves, all of Washington.

Police said the truck driver informed them that his truck developed engine trouble and was parked, and that after putting out flares he heard a crash as he was walking away from the machine. Lester Graves told police that he fell asleep while driving and woke up too late to avoid hitting the truck. The automobile wreckage was pinned underneath the back of the truck.

Joseph Chittam, Negro, 45, of Bowie, Md., died yesterday at Casualty Hospital from injuries suffered Saturday night when he was knocked down by an automobile in Bowie. Prince Georges County police said Joseph Hall, Negro, of Bowie, was driver of the car which struck Chittam.

Four Washingtonians were injured early yesterday when their car struck a pole on Route 4 just south of Upper Marlboro. They

LaGuardia Asked To Bar Meeting Of 'America First'

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Declaring that violence and bloodshed would result from the America First Committee rally scheduled for Madison Square Garden Thursday night, three civic groups today appealed to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to stop "this outrageous meeting from occurring."

A telegram signed by Dr. C. S. Weiss, editor of Uncle Sam's Digest; Samuel Nieman, president of the Sons of Liberty, and Joseph Goldsmith, president of the Taxpayers Union of New York City, added that "observers at other meetings of America First groups found in the audience notorious frontists, Nazis, hate-breeders and Fascists, also traitors to our country."

Charles A. Lindbergh, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and John Cudahy, former Ambassador to Belgium, are to speak at the rally.

Game So Hot Boy Sets Self on Fire

The heat of battle claimed a victim in the grandstands yesterday as Washington Redskins defeated the Cleveland Rams, 17 to 13, in a hard-fought game. A 12-year-old boy's pocket full of paper matches ignited while he was jumping up and down with excitement, painfully burning his right thigh.

The boy, Thomas Kusack, of 33-A Todd Place Northeast, was taken from the stands and given first aid by the stadium doctor, and later treated at Garfield Hospital and released.

Sabotage Hinted In $500,000 Defense Plant Fire

Portland, Me., Oct. 26 (AP).—Possibility of sabotage in the $500,000 early morning fire in the defense-busy Southworth Machine Co.'s main plant, which is engaged in making airplane parts, was being investigated tonight.

Pearce J. Francis, State insurance comissioner, said that 10 days ago one of the fire extinguishers at the plant was found to contain stone, sand and "other foreign matter."

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were called in to investigate the fire.

OPM Bars Scarce Metals for Autos

The OPM yesterday told the automobile industry that the use of scarce metals, such as chrome, nickel and aluminum, for passenger car ornaments must be discontinued December 15.

The order, it is conceded, may result in substantial business losses and employment dislocation for suppliers of the trimmings, but the OPM labor division hopes to transfer workers from that field to defense work rapidly.

Accountant Faces 17-Year-Old U. S. Bribery Charge Today

Trapped after 17 years of "borrowed" liberty by the long memory of an Internal Revenue Agent, Nathaniel J. Botwin, 39-year-old accountant, will stand before the Federal Court at Harrisonburg, Va., today to answer an indictment of attempting to bribe an officer returned against him April 28, 1924.

The Government's methodical culling of the lists of employes of emergency agencies for those with possible subversive connections exposed Botwin to detection by the Internal Revenue men-who-never-forget.

It was in January, 1942, that the chubby-faced, crinkly-haired 22-year-old certified public accountant who went under the name of Nathaniel J. Botwin left his New York office for his first big field job. This was to audit the accounts and adjust the income tax affairs of Henry Greenstone, a merchant of Staunton, Va.

Botwin worked over Greenstone's books for several months and completed his reports. But he made a mistake, the Federal Grand jurors for the Western District of Virginia declared when they handed up indictments in April.

One of these indictments asserted that Botwin desired some items to be "forgotten" and that to bring this about he offered $150 to Internal Revenue Agents Rufus P. Bell and R. S. Gochenour on the night of January 23, 1924.

Arraigned in Federal Court, Botwin was represented by the prominent attorney, George Gordon Battle. Botwin formally pleaded not guilty and passionately protested

RHYTHM ON THE FLYING SILVER SKATES . . .

Ruby and Bobby Give Themselves a Whirl

THREE MINNESOTA BOYS—Oscar Johnson and Eddie and Roy Shipstad—started the Follies just five years ago, have amazed both themselves and the public.

1. Here they come! Ruby and Bobby Maxson, youthful members of the Ice Follies brigade, come onto the rink flying.

2. Before they hit the ice, they take a few fancy turns like this. It looks easy when seen by the quick-eyed camera.

3. Their downward spin sends Ruby's costume and hair into the air, but does not take the smile from her face. It must be fun to be a "good skate." You'll see this pose longer in the picture than on the rink, for Ruby and Bobby never assume a static pose.

4. How's this, public? Is it riding the skates precariously, or isn't it? It looks like a lot of good timing and muscle coordination to us—but aren't they headed for a icy fall, or something? Ruby and Bobby are brother and sister, started skating as kids.

5. No, we were wrong again. The figure breaks up into something like this and each of the young performers is now an individual skater, rather than a duet.

WASHINGTONIANS will have their third serving of one of their favorite autumnal dishes—the Ice Follies—at Riverside Stadium, beginning November 4 and continuing for twelve days. The Ice Follies were Minnesota born and reared, are responsible for creating a tremendous amount of interest in ice skating in this country.

Each year they add new acts and new performers. Their floor show this time is heralded as more sensational than ever, their comedians more comic. So get your lap-robes ready and heat up a few bricks for your feet.

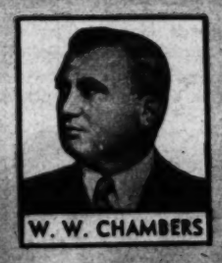
You Cannot Afford To Take A Chance!



W. W. CHAMBERS

Today you must give careful thought to everything you do. If you're careful, you'll live longer and accomplish more. Every step you take in the right direction, is a step for your own benefit! Choosing a funeral is a difficult task for many people, because they lack knowledge of funeral values. For instance, how would you know if you had paid $300 for a $165 funeral, or $500 for a funeral that should cost but $265? You should determine definitely where the best value can be secured, otherwise you would throw your money away. Hence, I repeat: "YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO TAKE A CHANCE."

Maybe you'll never have to choose a funeral, but some one in your family will. So I'm telling you to never pay $300, $400 or $500 if you cannot afford it! Instead, "IN CASE OF DEATH CALL CHAMBERS," then you'll get maximum value, a fine funeral for less money." For example, here are two funerals, both include 60 or more services—I'm justly proud to offer such outstanding value for so little money.

Beautiful full-couch casket covered with grey doeskin, beautifully lined interior. An ultra-modern burial receptacle with 60 services.

$265

Handsome Armco metal in silver finish; exquisite silk lining and pillow. This is a value so great that all who see it, say: It's amazing.

Chambers says: "I'll furnish you a Cemetery burial site for only $34.00; opened and closed." Ask any one, where you can get a better value? I don't believe you could!

Germans Report Wide Breach Made; Planes Batter Route Of American Aid

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 26.—German panzer and infantry divisions have broken Russian resistance "on a broad front" on the sector before Moscow, the news agency D. N. B. stated tonight, after fierce fighting which included a number of surprise Nazi attacks.

The agency failed to state exactly where the action occurred, describing the location simply as being in the middle sector of the Eastern Front. Surprise attacks enabled the Germans to seize a number of fortifications, D. N. B. said, while others were taken only after heavy fighting.

The Russians, in an attempt to check the advancing Germans, were supported by strong artillery fire, the report said. In a battle on this sector Friday the Germans took 4000 prisoners, ten tanks and 18 guns, and destroyed another 13 Russian tanks on the following day, according to D. N. B.

Reds Counterattack

Dispatches from other points on the Eastern Front reported a number of stubborn Soviet counterattacks which led to bloody fighting and finally resulted in Red army forces being driven west.

North of the Ukrainian industrial area, one dispatch said, 1700 Russian prisoners were taken yesterday.

Bomb destruction of parts of Russia's Murmansk railroad claimed today by the German high command indicated the Germans were taking precautions against British and American aid moving into Russia via the Arctic Sea route.

Press speculation indicated, however, it was the German conviction that it was next to impossible to deliver assistance to Russia swiftly enough to be decisive in the great military operations now apparently reaching a climax.

(The main railway line to Moscow from the Arctic is from the ice-free port of Murmansk. German commentators apparently failed to take into consideration the possibility that Soviet icebreakers might keep open a White Sea channel to Archangel, another possible port of entry for American and British aid, 200 miles east of the main line.)

The whole front was described as still in a "fluid condition" everywhere except immediately around Leningrad.

By the Associated Press

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 26.—Twenty-two persons were burned to death and 8 others injured, some seriously, 4 miles south of here tonight when a Montgomery-Birmingham bus struck a bridge and caught fire.

Night policeman B. R. Plyler said the victims were trapped when the bus was left standing up on its front end after the crash.

Plyler said 32 persons were aboard the bus, but was unable to account for 2.

The bus, a Birmingham local, left Montgomery at 8:30 p. m., and had made approximately 40 miles of its 100-mile trip.

Driver in Hospital

Plyler said one of those brought to the hospital here was the bus driver, whose name he did not know.

The hospital gave out the following list of injured brought here:

Ralph Scroggins, Birmingham, arm and ear injuries; William Penn, Troy, undetermined; Chris Chrumply, Enterprise, severe burns on feet; unidentified driver of the bus, critical burns; Otis Lunsford, Westville, Fla., severe burns; Sam Terry, undetermined; Nadine Jerry, undetermined, and Robert Taylor, undetermined.

George Easterly, passenger in a car which was following the bus, said it struck a concrete railing on the bridge, and "fire ran all over it in a few seconds.

"We could see the passengers running and screaming as the fire spread. It was all over in a few minutes."

Police believed the rear end of the bus struck the railing, exploding the gasoline tank and throwing the flaming liquid over the passengers.

Only the steel walls and charred bodies were left when the first rescue group arrived from Clanton.

Missouri Bus Overturns Three Times, 36 Hurt

Joplin, Mo., Oct. 26 (INS).—Thirty-six persons were injured today when a bus loaded with 60 passengers failed to take a curve and overturned three times near Neosho, Mo.

None of the injured was critically hurt and most of the injuries were confined to cuts and bruises. Soft mud into which the bus rolled was believed to have prevented more serious injuries.

Roosevelt Plea Ushers In Navy Day

Calls for Personal Sacrifice to Build An Unconquerable And United Nation

A call for personal sacrifice in the interest of a "united and unconquerable" America was issued last night by President Roosevelt, ushering in today's twentieth annual celebration of Navy Day, Nation-wide salute to the United States sea power.

The call was made in a letter addressed to Secretary Knox and made public by the Navy Department, which has arranged for scores of naval shore demonstrations throughout the country, with probably the most spectacular scheduled for Fairlawn Park in Washington.

President's Speech On All D. C. Stations

All six Washington radio stations will broadcast President Roosevelt's Navy Day speech at 10 tonight.

The demonstration, which will run from 8:30 a. m. to 5:15 p. m., will include about 20 different types of aviation and military exhibitions, climaxed by the city's first glimpse of parachute troops in action. Marine Corps paratroops from Quantico will do the jumping at 4 p. m.

President Speaks Tonight

Ceremonies at the John Paul Jones statue are to be led by the Military Order of the World War at 12:15 p. m., while a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, with President Roosevelt as speaker, will culminate the local observance. His address will be broadcast by all networks on a program beginning at 10 p. m.

The President is expected to answer many questions on foreign policy and bring the country up to date on developments since his radio speech on September 11, in which he revealed that "shoot on sight" orders had been given to the Navy.

Donovan to Preside

Features of the naval demonstration will be the catapulting of planes at 9 a. m. and again at noon; a half hour of tactical flying exhibition by Marine planes at 9:40 a. m.; the arrival of "King Neptune" and his court at 1 p. m., and a sham battle, complete with dive-bombers, landing operations and para-

LaGuardia Asked To Bar Meeting Of 'America First'

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Declaring that violence and bloodshed would result from the America First Committee rally scheduled for Madison Square Garden Thursday night, three civic groups today appealed to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to stop "this outrageous meeting from occurring."

A telegram signed by Dr. C. S. Weiss, editor of Uncle Sam's Digest; Samuel Nieman, president of the Sons of Liberty, and Joseph Goldsmith, president of the Taxpayers Union of New York City, added that "observers at other meetings of America First groups found in the audience notorious frontists, Nazis, hate-breeders and Fascists, also traitors to our country."

Charles A. Lindbergh, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and John Cudahy, former Ambassador to Belgium, are to speak at the rally.

Game So Hot Boy Sets Self on Fire

The heat of battle claimed a victim in the grandstands yesterday as Washington Redskins defeated the Cleveland Rams, 17 to 13, in a hard-fought game. A 12-year-old boy's pocket full of paper matches ignited while he was jumping up and down with excitement, painfully burning his right thigh.

The boy, Thomas Kusack, of 33-A Todd Place Northeast, was taken from the stands and given first aid by the stadium doctor, and later treated at Garfield Hospital and released.

Sabotage Hinted In $500,000 Defense Plant Fire

Portland, Me., Oct. 26 (AP).—Possibility of sabotage in the $500,000 early morning fire in the defense-busy Southworth Machine Co.'s main plant, which is engaged in making airplane parts, was being investigated tonight.

Pearce J. Francis, State insurance comissioner, said that 10 days ago one of the fire extinguishers at the plant was found to contain stone, sand and "other foreign matter."

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were called in to investigate the fire.

OPM Bars Scarce Metals for Autos

The OPM yesterday told the automobile industry that the use of scarce metals, such as chrome, nickel and aluminum, for passenger car ornaments must be discontinued December 15.

The order, it is conceded, may result in substantial business losses and employment dislocation for suppliers of the trimmings, but the OPM labor division hopes to transfer workers from that field to defense work rapidly.

Second Appeal

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night told John L. Lewis that "in this crisis of our national life there must be uninterrupted production of coal for making steel," and called on Lewis and his associates "as loyal citizens" to end the strike of 53,000 workers in "captive" mines supplying the steel companies.

In a letter to Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, Mr. Roosevelt replied to the union head's flat rejection on Saturday of a previous Presidential appeal that he order the miners to continue work pending settlement of the controversy over granting a union shop in the "captive" mines. The union already had agreed to a 30-day extension of operations under a temporary arrangement while the Defense Mediation Board endeavored to bring about a settlement.

Second Appeal

When the board last week, with the 30-day period ending Saturday night, reported to the President that it was unable to make a recommendation in the union shop issue, Mr. Roosevelt addressed Lewis on Friday, asking him to grant another extension of the temporary agreement. Lewis replied on Saturday, attacking the Mediation Board's "casual and lackadaisical" treatment of the dispute and declining to order the men to continue work after last Saturday night.

Yesterday the President dispatched the following letter to the mine union executive:

"Dear Mr. Lewis:

"I acknowledge your letter of yesterday. You say that you do not feel warranted in recommending an additional extension of the temporary agreement to keep the captive mines in operation pending a final settlement of the controversy. I must ask you to reconsider this decision.

"In this crisis of our national life there must be uninterrupted production of coal for making steel, that basic material of our national defense. That is essential to the preservation of our freedoms, yours and mine; those freedoms upon which the very existence of the United Mine Workers of America depends.

Mr. Myron Taylor is prepared to meet with you on Wednesday, to see if you and he in private and personal conference can work out a peaceful solution of the problem. You have agreed to confer with Mr. Taylor. During such conferences the production of coal for steel-making by the mine workers under the established wage scales of the Appalachian agreement should continue in the bread interest of the safety and defense of the Nation.

"I am, therefore, as President of the United States, asking you

First Lady Hits Wage Control As 'Involuntary Bondage'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight that wage control seemed unfair and might be regarded as "involuntary bondage."

Declaring in a sponsored broadcast over an NBC network that while prices were rising, hearings on the emergency price control bill were being held in "leisurely fashion," the President's wife said:

"There is naturally an appeal made, when prices are controlled, to control wages, but it seems unfair, on the whole. The Thirteenth Amendment . . . makes many people doubt whether doing so might not be in certain instances classed as involuntary bondage.

"It would seem better, perhaps, to protect the worker from a rising cost of living not only through control, and then appeal to his democratic patriotism for a voluntary stabilizing agreement, arrived at by the machinery instituted for collective bargaining."

To check inflation in the country, she recommended removing excess money by taxation or by selling defense bonds.

D. C. Mother and Baby Killed, 17 Others Injured in Traffic

A Washington woman and her 10-month-old son were killed and six others injured in an automobile-truck smashup near South Hill, Va., the Associated Press reported yesterday as traffic mishaps in Washington and nearby Maryland claimed one life and injured 11 other persons.

Sadie Graves, 25, Negro, of 62 Patterson Street Northeast, and her 10-month-old son were killed, and her husband, Harvey Graves, was injured in the crash of their automobile into a parked truck on Route 1, near South Hill, about 175 miles from Washington.

Others injured were Banks Graves, Junior Graves, Lester Graves, Virginia Lee Graves and Tate Graves, all of Washington.

Police said the truck driver informed them that his truck developed engine trouble and was parked, and that after putting out flares he heard a crash as he was walking away from the machine. Lester Graves told police that he fell asleep while driving and woke up too late to avoid hitting the truck. The automobile wreckage was pinned underneath the back of the truck.

Accountant Faces 17-Year-Old U. S. Bribery Charge Today

Trapped after 17 years of "borrowed" liberty by the long memory of an Internal Revenue Agent, Nathaniel J. Botwin, 39-year-old accountant, will stand before the Federal Court at Harrisonburg, Va., today to answer an indictment of attempting to bribe an officer returned against him April 28, 1924.

The Government's methodical culling of the lists of employes of emergency agencies for those with possible subversive connections exposed Botwin to detection by the Internal Revenue men-who-never-forget.

It was in January, 1942, that the chubby-faced, crinkly-haired 22-year-old certified public accountant who went under the name of Nathaniel J. Botwin left his New York office for his first big field job. This was to audit the accounts and adjust the income tax affairs of Henry Greenstone, a merchant of Staunton, Va.

Botwin worked over Greenstone's books for several months and completed his reports. But he made a mistake, the Federal Grand jurors for the Western District of Virginia declared when they handed up indictments in April.

One of these indictments asserted that Botwin desired some items to be "forgotten" and that to bring this about he offered $150 to Internal Revenue Agents Rufus P. Bell and R. S. Gochenour on the night of January 23, 1924.

Arraigned in Federal Court, Botwin was represented by the prominent attorney, George Gordon Battle. Botwin formally pleaded not guilty and passionately protested

Neutrality Act Report's Text

The text of the majority report of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on its bill for repeal of the three sections of the Neutrality Act, follows:

The Committee on Foreign Relations to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 237) to repeal Section 6 of the Neutrality Act of 1939, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with amendments, and recommended that the joint resolution, as amended, do pass.

Statement

The joint resolution as reported by the committee provides for the repeal of Sections 2, 3 and 6 of the Neutrality Act of 1939.

Following the President's message on October 9, 1941 (relating to the modification of such act), the House, on October 17, 1941, passed House Joint Resolution 237, providing for the repeal of Section 6 of the Neutrality Act of 1939. Your committee is in accord with the views expressed in the House report (H. Rept. 1267) accompanying House Joint Resolution 237 as to the necessity for repealing that section which prohibited the arming of American merchant vessels.

The committee also believes that in the interest of the defense and protection of American rights the restrictions voluntarily imposed by the United States upon its nationals by Sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939 should be removed at the same time. These sections, which prevent American vessels from carrying cargoes and passengers to belligerent destinations and to areas defined by the President as "combat areas," were enacted to meet a situation arising from the outbreak of war in Europe when it seemed prudent to restrict the movement of American citizens, American vessels, and American cargoes in order to avoid dangerous controversies with belligerents.

Changed Situation

Since then the situation has changed entirely. Continental Europe has been overrun by conquesting armies. Nation after nation has gone down under military aggression, and a large part of the population of Europe is enslaved. A movement of world conquest is under way, with resulting death, destruction, and terrorism. No nation is secure in the face of this threat. The aggressors are struggling to obtain control of the high seas as a part of their plan of conquest of continents. If they should gain control of the seas, the United States and the entire Western Hemisphere would be immediately and most seriously threatened.

In view of this situation, the United States, as a part of its own plan of self-defense, has adopted the policy of extending aid to those nations resisting aggression. That policy was expressed in the Lend-Lease Act of March 11, 1941, and has been indorsed by the overwhelming majority of the American people. Under the Lend-Lease Act, aid has been given, and is being given, in ever-increasing quantities to countries whose defense is considered vital to our defense. The purpose of this policy is to preserve the security of the United States; to keep war from the shores of the Western World.

Sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939 stand directly in the way of carrying out effectively this policy of aid to the nations resisting aggression and impede our defense efforts. American merchant vessels are prohibited from carrying needed supplies to such nations and are prevented from bringing essential defense materials to the United States from abroad. It does not seem reasonable to exert the utmost national effort to produce and acquire defense articles and materials and not take steps necessary to insure their full utilization. Every cargo sent to the bottom of the Atlantic diminishes our preparations for the national defense.

Naval Treaty Cited

The London Treaty of 1930 sets forth "established rules of international law" for submarines in their relations with merchant vessels. In these rules, which have been formally accepted by all of the principal maritime powers, including Germany, there is no expressed distinction between armed and unarmed merchant vessels. The rules are:

(1) In their action with regard to merchant ships, submarines must conform to the rules of international law to which surface vessels are subject.

(2) In particular, except in the case of persistent refusal to stop on being duly summoned, or of active resistance to visit or search, a warship, whether surface vessel or submarine, may not sink or render incapabl eof navigation a merchant vessel without having first placed passengers, crew, and ship's papers in a place of safety. For this purpose the ship's boats are not regarded as a place of safety unless the safety of the passengers and crew is assured, in the existing sea and weather conditions, by the proximity of and, or the presence of another vessel which is in a position to take them on board.

It was first testified in the committee hearings that, in actual practice, Hitler does not make any distinction between armed and unarmed merchant vessels. In defiance of the above-quoted rules, to which his government has adhered, his naval forces are sinking indiscriminately armed and unarmed merchant vessels.

When Congress enacted the Neutrality Act of 1939, it was the hope that by prohibiting American ships from visiting belligerent ports and entering combat zones American merchant vessels would not be attacked or sunk. However, Hitler's submarines have attacked and sunk American merchant vessels in areas outside of combat zones prescribed by our Government and in some cases outside of the war zones prescribed by the German government. By this course of conduct, it appears to be the fixed policy of the Nazi government to sink American merchant ships wherever they may be found. If the United States should prohibit its ships from entering any area where the possibility of their being sunk exists, it would logically follow that we would prohibit our ships from going anywhere except by the permission of Nazi submarine commanders.

No Change in Neutrality

It is particularly important to stress the bearing of future developments, as well as past sinkings, in keeping our sea lanes open. If Japan can close up whole areas of the Pacific and if Germany can close up areas in Africa, and perhaps in the Middle East and off the coast of India, we would be almost entirely cut off from the main sources of our supply by the limitations which we have imposed on ourselves.

Any assumption that by the provisions of this resolution our status of neutrality will be changed is entirely erroneous. The status of neutrality is determined solely by international law. The voluntary restrictions imposed by the Neutrality Act of 1939 were in derogation of American rights under international law, and by repealing sections 2, 3 and 6 of such act the United States is merely restored to the same status as a neutral which it had under international law prior to the enactment of such sections.

For these resons, the committee recommended that sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939, as well as section 6 of such act, be repealed and urge the speedy enactment of the joint resolution as reported by the committee.

Allies Withdraw In French Africa

Vichy, Oct. 26 (AP).—An official source said today that the British and De Gaullist troops which last week marched into French Somaliland, East African colony which has remained subordinate to Vichy, were withdrawing northward toward Eritrea. The combined force was said to have abandoned Dasenaito, only 18 miles north of Tajura, an important port across the gulf of Tajua from Djibuti, but still held the town of Aigori.

(Authoritative British sources never confirmed the French report of a British-Free French invasion of Somaliland, and said they believed the report was put out "in an effort to district attention from reprisal shootings in France.") his complete innocence. He was ordered to stand trial at the September term of court in 1924. Greenstone posted a $1500 bond and Botwin returned to New York to prepare his defense.

A week before the date set for his trial, Nathaniel Botwin disappeared and his $1500 bond was forfeited.

Star Begins to Rise

Not long after that a gifted young accountant named James Botwin began to make his mark in New York. This man displayed a flare for investigative and analytic auditing. He was a chief accountant for the public utility investigation conducted by Judge John Mack.

Numerous private firms employed him and he now has a sheaf of letters in which these employers commend his skill. He served the New York State Power Commission and in the early thirties joined the Federal Power Commission, continuing upon its rosters during many extensive investigations of national utilities. A few months ago the OPM invited James Botwin to be one of its staff.

As the Government's emergency agencies began to tighten up their organizations, painstaking inquiries were undertaken to make certain that the aid to Britain effort would not be sabotaged from within by subversive characters.

All employes were fingerprinted, but that would not have meant anything in this case because fingerprinting was not a routine for Federal prisoners in 1924. However the names of all emergency personnel were checked with established departments, including the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Clew Detected

"Botwin, Botwin? Hmm . . . There's something familiar about that name," murmured an Internal Revenue Agent as he scanned the lists submitted by OPM.

"Let me see that file of fugitives . . . Hmm. Yes, here is a Nathaniel Botwin. Perhaps this man, James, could tell us something about Nathaniel. Let us ask him to come to see us."

James came and with a rueful smile said he was Nathaniel. He waived removal to Harrisonburg. A warrant was signed by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough and Botwin was taken to the Virginia city in a United States Marshal's van last Friday.

At Botwin's side when he is brought before Federal Judge John Paul today will be two Washington attorneys, William J. Hughes, jr., and Nicholas J. Chiascione.

As a matter of course Botwin will ask to be released on bond until the new date for his trial. But somehow he has no confidence that it will be granted.

troops, at 4:10 p. m. Machine gun demonstrations, drills, community singing and a deep-sea diving show are also scheduled.

Col. William J. Donovan will act as toastmaster at the banquet tonight. Other speakers will be Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Rear Admiral Emory S. The President said in his letter to Secretary Knox that while the country had celebrated October 27—Theodore Roosevelt's birthday and anniversary of the Navy's founding by the Continental Congress—as Navy Day for the past 19 years, "this year we go further and expand that observance to 'Navy and total defense day,' a change whose significanc ewill be clear to all right-thinking Americans."

"Ship for ship, man for man, I am proud and confident in knowing the Navy is ready to prove to the Nation and to the forces of evil its fitness to assume its responsibility."

Knox, who left for the Midwest over the weekend to join in opening a new ordnance plant at Centerline, Mich., tomorrow, will make his Navy Day address from Detroit beginning at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

About 40 patriotic organizations are scheduled to place wreaths during the ceremonies at the John Paul Jones statue. At the conclusion of the exercises, at 12:30 p. m., another wreath will be placed by National Commander George L. Senate Opens Neutrality Act Debate Today

Roosevelt when he asked the legislators to revise the neutrality law.

"It does not seem reasonable to exert the utmost national effort to produce and acquire defense articles and materials and not take steps necessary to insure their full utilization," the report said. "Every cargo sent to the bottom of the Atlantic diminishes our preparations for defense."

Hitler was charged by the committee with violating the London Naval Treaty of 1930, setting forth "established rules of international law" for submarines in their relations with merchant ships—rules that Germany approved.

It was testified "in the committee hearings," the report said, "that, in actual practice, Hitler does not make any distinction between armed and unarmed merchant vessels.

"When Congress enacted the Neutrality Act in 1939, it was the hope that by prohibiting American ships from visiting belligerent ports and entering combat zones American merchant vessels would not be attacked or sunk.

"However, Hitler's submarines have attacked and sunk American merchant vessels in areas outside of combat zones prescribed by our Government and in some cases outside of the war zones prescribed by our Government and in some cases outside of the war zones prescribed by the German Government."

Therefore, the report declared, "it appears to be the fixed policy of the Nazi government to sink American merchant ships wherever they may be found."

"If the United States should prohibit its ships from entering any area where the possibility of their being sunk exists," the report continued, "it would logically follow that we would prohibit our ships from going anywhere except by the permission of Nazi submarine commanders.

"It is particularly important to stress the bearing of future developments, as well as past sinkings, in keeping our sea lanes open. If Japan can close up whole areas of the Pacific and if Germany can close up areas in Africa, and perhaps in the Middle East and off the coast of India, we would be almost entirely cut off from the main sources of our supply by the limitations which we have imposed on ourselves."

Confident of Senate approval of the wide changes in the law and subsequent House acquiesence, Administration leaders last night were intent on efforts to confine the debate to two weeks. They have been assured that isolationist Senators would engage in no filibuster, though Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, declared the people will have time to be heard on "this go-to-war program" before the final vote.

Leaders' polls are said to show from 52 to 60 votes in favor of the changes proposed, and a margin of about 70 in the House, which originally voted only to permit the arming of merchant ships.

Non-interventionists in the Senate continued last night their attack on the program, with Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, declaring that "passage of this resolution is equivalent to a declaration of war."

Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, in a broadcast to his home State asserted:

"This arming of merchant ships; this sending American-flag ships and American seamen into war zones—these are admittedly war measures. . . .

"The tragically momentous question of peace or war should be submitted to Congress; should be settled by Congress. That is the constitutional way."

On the other hand, Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, in a radio address called for total repeal of the Neutrality Act and said "we owe it to our seamen, to our ship owners and to all the people of the country" to arm merchant ships.

The Neutrality Act, he said, was "evidence of self-restraint" in a world "harassed and tortured by war," but the provisions of the act "are outmoded and are now hostile to our interests.

and your associated officers of the United Mine Workers of America, as loyal citizens, to come now to the aid of your country. I ask that work continue at the captive coal mines pending the settlement of the dispute.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Lewis received the letter shortly after 6 p. m. and said he would have "no comment whatever" last night. Thus it appeared that the captive mines would be idle today.

Meanwhile, Lewis was urged by some 75 local union presidents of mine workers, meeting at Uniontown, Pa., to call out all commercial mine workers, numbering more than 400,000, if necessary, to back up the union demand in hte steel companies' mines.

The meeting, as reported by the Associated Press, was told by William Hynes, district president, that "the public should not criticize the union alone for this situation . . . We have just as much patriotism as a lot of others whom I could mention. We have merit on our side."

Hopes of reaching a settlement apparently rested on the expected conferences between Taylor, former chairman of the board of United States Steel Corporation, who, with Lewis, worked out the first agreement between the corporation and the U. M. W. in 1937.

In his Friday letter, Mr. Roosevelt had asked that Lewis and Taylor head the two sides of a bipartisan group proposed by the Mediation Board as one method of trying to negotiate the dispute. Lewis, in his Saturday refusal to order the men to continue at work, agreed, however, to confer with Taylor, and it was reported yesterday that Mr. Roosevelt had sent Board Chairman William H. Davis to Taylor's New York City home to try to arrange a meeting.

The United States Steel Board meets tomorrow and it was assumed here that the meeting will authorize Taylor to speak for it. Other steel companies apparently were counted on to follow United States Steel's course. The captive mines affected are located in the soft coal area of Pennsylvania, Illinois, West Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama.

Estimates of the length of time the steel plants could continue operating on present supplies of coal varied. In some quarters it was said that some blast furnaces might be closed down at the end of this week, while others could run for several weeks.

Other fronts in the defense strike situation brought the following reports by the Associated Press:

Workers at Aluminum Co. of America plants in Maryville, Tenn., and Badin, N. C., voted to strike if necessary to back their demand for elimination of a North-South wage differential amounting to approximately 20 cents an hour.

At Washington, Mediation Board spokesmen said an investigation would be completed in the aluminum case and the board would make its report by November 15. The C. I. O. union officials said that strike authorization did not necessarily mean an immediate walkout.

A dispute between an A. F. L. Metal Trades Council and a welders' union in Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., shipyards headed for a showdown Monday. The Trades Council announced it would begin replacing welders who have not returned to their jobs on Monday with workers obtained from outside the state. The welders asked the recent A. F. L. national convention to hold a hearing on their petition for a separate union, then left the A. F. L. and formed an independent union. The Trade Council then barred them from one of the yards unless they had A. F. L. cards and the strike followed.

'No Retreat!' Tojo Tells Japanese

Premier Declares Nippon Must Go On, 'Ever Expanding'

Tokyo, Oct 26.—Premier General Hideki Tojo declared Japan "must go on and develop in ever-expanding progress—there is no retreat!" in a speech at Osaka today.

"Naturally difficulties will arise," said Tojo. "But if Japan's hundred millions merge and go forward nothing can stop us. If this state of preparedness is completed diplomacy becomes an easy affair. Wars can be fought with ease.

Calls for Solidarity

"Unity! Unity!—That is what makes people one and a whole, solving all problems."

Linking his international and domestic policies, he said:

"If the policy to which Japan is committed is to be enforced in the face of all the forces of opposition, the first requisite is to develop the total strength of our people, using their momentum in the prosecution of that policy."

Simultaneously with the premier's strong demand for internal solidarity, the foreign office controlled Japan Times and Advertiser and the official Domei news agency gave considerable attention to Thailand.

The newspaper pointed out that trade with Thailand has grown sharply since 1939 because of heavy Japanese buying of rice, rubber and tin, and that "the balance of trade almost has turned in Thailand's favor."

Envoy Is Hopeful

Domei carried an interview with Teiji Tsubogami, minister to Thailand, who was quoted as saying he discerned no ill-feeling against Japan among Thailanders, but that, the news agency reporter said, it was his impression they dislike the use of Japan's phrase, "greater East Asia coprosperity sphere."

"I am sure economic relations between Japan and Thailand will become more satisfactory as time goes on," the minister said.

"What Japan wants of Thailand is the Thailand make rapid progress in becoming a powerful country, thus contributing stability to East Asia.

"Japan and Thailand should . . . go ahead, hand in hand, for the realization of mutual solidarity.

War Sidelights

Briton Asks 'Purge' of High Officials

Cambridge, England, Oct. 26 (AP).—Clement Davies, Liberal member of Parliament, demanded today that "ministers responsible for the inadequate equipment of British forces in France and Belgium be punished."

Quoting from the dispatches of Gen. Viscount Gort, commander of the B. E. F., Davis declared in an address to the Cambridge Liberal Club that if those responsible had disappeared or were dead, "as were many of the soldiers and airmen concerned," the incident might be considered closed.

"But the men responsible still hold high office," he continued, "Sir Kingsley Wood, who had said (as air minister) that the number of planes accruing to the Allies was equal to that of the Axis, has been promoted to be chancellor of the exchequer and placed again in the war cabinet.

"Sir Samuel Hoare, who at one time was responsible for the air ministry, is Ambassador in Spain; Lord Simon, also in the war cabinet, is lord high chancellor."

Test Singapore Defense

Copyright by New York Times

Singapore, Oct. 26.—The British forces in Malaya tested their defense against an air-borne attack in large-scale trial warfare Saturday.

Troops were landed from transport planes with the object of taking over a strategic airdrome motorized infantry was rushed from distant points to deal with the "invaders."

After several hours of realistic sham hostilities the defenders, composed primarily of Australian and Malay contingents, had killed or captured nearly all of the hundreds of parachutists taking part in the games.

The British forces showed that their experiences in Greece and Crete have had an important effect on their conceptions of warfare in Malaya.

The attack on the airfield presupposed a situation in which the enemy had occupied Thailand, had launched a drive against the northern Malayan frontier and gained footholds along the eastern coast of the peninsula.

Nazi Air Officer Killed

London, Oct. 26 (INS).—A high-ranking Luftwaffe officer identified as Gen. Ottenbacher, chief of a German air division, has been killed in action, the Moscow radio said tonight in a broadcast quoted by the Exchange Telegraph News Agency.

The general was said to have met death when his plane was shot down over the Moscow front.

House Group Will Call Nelson

The House Committee Investigating Defense Labor Migration announced yesterday that it will call Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, for testimony at hearings beginning Tuesday.

Chairman Tolan (Democrat), of California, said the committee would seek to determine from the testimony of Nelson and other representatives of the OPM "to what extent the defense program is utilizing existing facilities; to what extent existing plants and equipment have been converted for defense production; and what plans for such conversion are now being drawn."

U. S. Arms Giving British Edge in North Africa

By Harold Denny

Copyright by New York Times

With the British in the African Desert, Oct. 26.—The American war material which has been flowing into the Near East in a constantly increasing volume during recent months is now beginning to make its weight felt heavily in the western desert, the only front where the British are facing the Axis forces on the ground.

American tanks, airplanes, guns, trucks and a hundred other smaller war items, plus the steady, strong stream of arms and men which Britain herself is sending from the home land, the dominions and colonies, have changed the whole face of the situation at this end of the Middle East theater as compared with last summer when the British were defeated in each attempt to strike forward simply by the superiority in weight and quantity of Axis, chiefly German, equipment.

A visit to the forward zones now shows what strides the British have made toward securing the western gateway to Alexandria, Cairo and the Suez Canal during these months when the war on the ground in the desert has been limited to patrolling and constant fighting around Tobruk where the besieged British garrison still refuses to weaken.

Both Sides Gathering Forces

From the standpoint of military operations covering the four months since June, it may be said that it has been a period of watching and waiting by both sides. But, in the meantime, both sides have been trying to strengthen themselves against whatever move the other might make. Neither has seemed disposed to risk its men and equipment on any ambitious project which might fail.

There is little doubt that the Axis forces have strengthened their position in Libya. How well they have been able to keep up gasoline and oil supplies cannot accurately be told, but the fact that they have put comparatively few of their tanks into action recently, even against Tobruk, and that there has been a marked decrease in their air activity, suggests that they are economizing.

It is considered impossible, however, that Germany and Italy can have strengthened their position in Libya even to a respectable fraction of the British improvement following the British retirement from forward positions on hte escarpment and on the coastal plain. It is pointed out that a majority of the British tanks were wrecked and left in German hands while the Germans were able to get theirs from the field and to repair them. At the time, there were some who thought the Germans could have been driven straight on to Sidi Barrani or farther.

Correspondents who witnessed the battle shook their heads over the irretrievably lost British equipment.

Picture Altered Now

A tour of forward positions now shows an enormously altered picture. Fortifications everywhere have been extended and strengthened while the roads have been improved.

The numbers of men and the quantities of material cannot be indicated for obvious reasons. But when your reporter first saw British troops in action early in May near the Libyan border he was shocked to find the British actually fighting German tanks with ordinary trucks, mounting light cannon. That situation has been radically changed. The British are now reasonably strong in tanks in the western desert and they are steadily growing stronger.

During recent days American tanks have been moved up into the intermedate area to give the British crews the finishing touches to the training they have been undergoing for months with the aid of American experts hundreds of miles farther back. An imposing number of American tanks has now arrived with more coming, and they are one of the most important factors of the changing desert situation.

At the same time British tanks are also rolling in large numbers and have taken up positions, like the American tanks, in the intermediate area from where they could be rushed forward on short notice should the Axis threaten Egypt again.

There has been and there still is considerable discussion about the fighting qualities of the American tanks which are now, for the first time, deep in the desert. In some ways they are the best fighting vehicles of the kind ever seen. They were not designed for desert warfare, however, and the British have been obliged to change them in some respects to make them practicable here.

They have other shortcomings about which it would be better for the Germans to find out for themselves. The later tanks to arrive will have these shortcomings rectified for the United States is sending military and civilian experts here in waves to study American and British equipment of all sorts, on the scene, to learn how ours can be bettered.

The improvement of Britain's tank situation in the western desert is paralleled by the improvement in her air position.

When Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell launched his drive to the West last December, the British had but a few obsolescent craft with which, by masterful handling, they beat the Italian planes from the skies, blasted them on the airfields and obtained the air superiority which vitally helped Sir Archibald to achieve his brilliant victories.

Now British airplanes operating over the western desert and in Libya can be counted by the hundreds. The British Hurricanes and Blenheim light bombers during recent months have been decisively reinforced by American Tomahawks and Glenn Martin light bombers.

It is no longer a secret that the British have greatly increased the number of troops in the western desert and that long trains craw up to the forward areas loaded with tanks, guns and bombs. The spirit of these troops is high. And the morale of the troops, who have spent long months of unbroken boredom and hardship, is also high

London Expects Nazis to Push To Astrakhan If Rostov Falls

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 26.—The fall of Rostov, big Black Sea shipping and manufacturing center on the Don River, probably would be the signal for a new German drive on Astrakhan, informed sources said today.

This would involve an advance of 400 miles from the Don across the wide isthmus which separates the Black and Caspian Seas and would take the Germans to their furthermost World War outpost. Astrakhan is near the mouth of the Volga where it empties into the Caspian Sea.

Although the distance involved in such an advance is great, the Germans thereby would accomplish two objectives.

Two-Fold Objectives

They would sever the bulk of the Russian armies and industries from their oil supplies in the Caucasus, and they would cut into separate fronts the forces defending the Caucasus and the rest of Russia. They would also imperil the British-American supply line coming up through Iran to the Soviet front.

Although the Soviet has made strenuous efforts in recent years to develop a "second Baku" in the Ural Mountains to the east of the Volga, it is understood that about 75 per cent of the Russian supply of oil comes from Baku and the other fields in the Caucasus.

If Rostov falls Russia's most direct connection with Iran would be cut. A rail line runs directly from Moscow through Rostov to Baku and other ports on the Caspian Sea in the southeastern Caucasus. From there it is a shipping distance of only about 300 miles across the Caspian to Iranian ports fed by a rail line connecting with the Persian Gulf.

A German advance to the Volga probably would make it impossible for the Russians to use that broad stream as an alternate shipping route from the Caspian. However, there is a roundabout rail route from the lower Caspian which connects with Tashkent and the Turksib Railway east of the Aral Sea. The Turksib Railway connects with Kuibyshev on the Volga, where some Soviet government departments have established themselves.

Rostov also is the terminus of canals joining the Don and Sea of Azov with the Caspian, and the city's fall would result in virtually excluding the Soviet from the Black Sea. The pipeline from the Baku oil fields also would be cut.

Russian forces left in the high mountain ranges of the Caucasus to defend the oil fields, however, presumably could still be supplied from Iran even if the Germans succeeded in driving to Astrakhan.

(It is on the Caucasian front that speculation most often has mentioned the possibility of British forces in the Middle East joining hands in a common battle line with Russian troops.)

Canadian Air Fighters Cripple Three Nazi Ships Off Holland

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 26.—The Royal Canadian Air Force Coastal Command Squadron, which in its first month of operations is said to have damaged at least 30,000 tons of German shipping, added three more Nazi vessels to its total in fierce early morning attacks off the Netherlands coast today, the air ministry announced.

Two direct hits were made on "a very large ship" in a heavily-escorted convoy off Terschelling, a medium-sized ship in the same convoy was hit amidships and a ship in another convoy off Ijmuiden was left with its stern afire, the ministry said.

Two Missing

After the coastal command had made its morning attack, Blenheims of the bomber command, with fighter escort, returned to strike at Axis shipping off the Dutch coast in the afternoon.

During the day British offensive patrol flights were made over north and northwest France, and objectives in the Dieppe, Cherbourg and Brest areas were attacked, a communique said tonight. Two British fighters were reported missing.

Earlier squadrons of British fighters had swept over northern France, "but few enemy aircraft were seen," the statement said.

R. A. F. fighters renewed the attack on German continental targets by daylight today, sweeping high across the Channel toward Calais and the Belgian coast.

(The German High Command announced that the German air force had destroyed three British vessels of a total of 12,000 tons in British waters Saturday night.)

A 21-year-old Toronto pilot, Sergt. D. Moss, flew his Hudson bomber through a storm of antiaircraft fire to drop bombs on the larger vessel and reported seeing the flashes of two explosions on the vessel's stern.

Explosion Amidships

The smaller ship in the same convoy was bombed and machine-gunned, and an explosion was seen amidship.

The third ship, equally well escorted, also was attacked with both bombs and bullets. A strong fire was left burning astern.

In addition to attacking the ships the Air Ministry reported that the R. A. F. shot up freight trains, oil tank cars, cranes, barges and a radio station.

Bodies of 2 Men Are Recovered From Potomac

The bodies of two men were recovered from the Potomac River yesterday, one of them being snagged by a fisherman's line.

John Chambers, of 2325 N Street Northwest, who was fishing near the Three Sisters Islands above Key Bridge, hooked the body of Henry C. Dismer, 48, of 1339 Montague Street Northwest. Chambers made his line fast and called the harbor police who recoveered the body. Dismer had been reported missing to police a week ago from his home.

Earlier, police recovered the body of Louis Lombardi, 48, of 324 Fourth Street Northeast, from the river near Bridge. Police described Lombardi as having been ill and said the body had been in the water at least four days.

Nazis Hurling in More Men

The German air attack on Moscow was said to be growing stronger every day.)

New Hillel House Is Dedicated On Campus of Maryland U.

Universal Photographers

PRESENTATION—Mrs. Louis Lebowitz, of Mount Rainier, president of the Southern Maryland Lodge of the Women's Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith, presents to Rabbi Samuel Silver a menorah at exercises yesterday dedicating the new quarters of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation of the University of Maryland

Religious values still are needed by a world that is crumbling and should be taught by private groups in the university to keep alive these virtues, Dr. Abram L. Sachar, national director of the B"nai Brith Hillel Foundation, declared yesterday at dedication exercises for the new Hillel House at Maryland University.

Dr. Sachar concurred in the sentiments, expressed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland that a tax-supported institution could not emphasize any religious institution but that "while such institutions are not a part of the university, they still are not apart."

"We are not here to dedicate a physical structure that already is outgrown. We are dedicating a program and by our action we are affirming that though the whole world is crumbling there will be no moratorium of the values we wish to salvage, either spiritual or democratic," Dr. Sacher said.

Rubenstein Presides

The dedication exercises were held in the Agriculture Auditorium at Maryland University, with Frank J. Rubenstein, chairman of the Hillel Advistory Committee, presiding. The invocation by the Rev. Nathaniel Action, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, College Park was followed by the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. Herman W. Hertzberg, accompanied by Mrs. Maurice Bisgyer, and the massing of the colors by Scout Troops 200 and 201.

State Senator L. Harold Sothoron stressed the necessity for religious training as a foundation for a right perspective on the life and University President H. C. Byrd welcomed the group and declared the new house "another milestone in the development of a close and harmonious relationship between the various groups on the Maryland University campus."

Maurice Bisgyer, supreme secretary, brought greetings from the Supreme Lodge, B'nai B'rith, and President Edward Rosenblum of the District Grand Lodge, also brought greetings. Morris Rosenman, president of the Student Council of Hillel House, thanked the donors who made possible the new building.

Candelabra Presented

Rabbi Samuel Silver, director of th University of Maryland Hillel Foundation, pointed out that holding of the dedication exercises despite the fact that "our brethren are in misery and anguish" was necessary to show that the spirit of Jewry still lives" and "we prepare here a citadel of Jewry to replace those we have lost."

Mrs. Louis Lebowitz, president of the Southern Maryland Lodge of the Woman's Auxiliary, B'nai B'rith, presented a menorah, or seven-pronged candelabra, to the house from the women.

A reception followed at the new house, 4505 Knox Road, College Park, Md.

Daring Red Fliers Use Shrewd Bluff To Bag Bombers

Ankara, Turkey, Oct. 25 (Delayed) (AP).—The combination of fatalistic Russian daring and shrewd tactics is enabling Red airmen to bring down many German bombers even with third-string pursuit planes, an American observer just arrived from the Soviet reported today.

The Russian pilots ram their planes for a nose-on crash with the bombers whose forward fire is not especially effective. The Germans thus are usually forced to swerve upward, exposing the tender bellies of the bombers to the entire force of the fighting planes' guns.

The observer said that sometimes the Germans refuse to swerve and the planes crash head-on. Often the crews of both planes are killed, but the stouter construction of some of the small fighting planes often permits them to continue even after shearing off the wing or tail of the bombers.

Defense Publicity Grows Into Complex, $10,000,000-a-Year Enterprise

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

The United States Government has developed in the last 15 months a vast uncoordinated defense information service which will cost more than $10,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

This service is being run by an army of 1,436 newspaper reporters, clerks, poets, stenographers, psychologists, cartoonists and song writers, whose object is to inform the people of this country of the requirements, objectives, and progress of their defense effort and to remind the enemies of this country that it is concerned in the war.

It is an unique experiment. It sprawls all over this country, extend into the English countryside, and carries its message all over the world. It is run by nobody in particular and by several hundred government officials in general, and its actions are bound to affect the whole course of the national effort.

Eight Government agencies are chiefly concerned with defense information, as distinguishel from the nondefense information which is handled by 26 other press agency departments.

The eight are the War, Navy, Treasury and State Departments, the Office of Emergency Management and the Selective Service System, the offices of the Coordinator of Information and of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs.

Superimposed on these press departments is the new Office of Facts and Figures, headed by Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, who was appointed last Saturday to the task of "corrrelating" defense information.

A survey of the activities of the defense information sections shows that the Navy Department has the largest personnel.

Lieut. Comdr. R. W. Berry, who runs this service, has under his indirect control 211 employees. The indirect unit is working on a 1941-42 budget of $75,000, which does not pay for any of its salaries or any of its main press, radio or motion picture projects. The general opinion is that it is an efficient, careful organization with an annual expense nearer $1,000,000.

The War Department's organization, under Brig. Gen. A. D. Surles, has 259 employes. It also is working on a $75,000 budget, with all salaries coming out of other funds available to Secretary Stimson.

The State Department and Selective Service System press units have personnels of eight and nine respectively.

The chief of the State Department's division of current information is Michael J. McDermott, who is generally recognized as one of the most able press officers in Washington. He has recently assumed the additional task of laying down the broad policy to be followed in broadcasts to foreign countries.

His budget for the last fiscal year was $110,113 and the selective service estimate for this year is $30,000.

The two most active information departments are at the Treasury and the OEM. Charged with presenting the defense bond program to the Nation, the Treasury has increased its normal staff of about 10 to 59 and has also added 43 persons in Washington and 132 throughout the 48 States.

The Treasury Division's allotment for 1941-42 is $3,343,085, the largest amount for any information group. But this appropriation has had the effect of bringing money back into the Treasury.

The services of top-flight song writers like Irving Berlin have been acquired gratis; free time has been given as required by radio companies; four regular programs have been produced over nationwide chains, and both newspaper and motion picture company owners have cooperated.

Actually the Treasury Department has branched out from the narrow aim of selling bonds to the broader field of creating public morale.

The OEM press division under Robert W. Horton deals with such technical questions as the supply of machine tools and the shortage of strategic materials. Horton put trained newspaper reporters in each of his key agencies with instructions to obtain information that would be not only intelligible to experts but also understandable to the public.

In one month his 220 helpers issued 197 handouts and distributed 3,980,000 mimeographed pages. It has spent $40,000 producing transcriptions for about 375 radio stations which were induced to run off records explaining to the public the problems in "tooling up" for national defense.

Nazi Banks Exploit Conquests

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 26.—German bankers are rapidly spreading their influence over Europe behind German forces of occupation.

The German financial publication Bank-Archive drew attention today to the expansion of German banks into France and into eastern and southeastern Europe as well as to the great strides generally in building a new economy for the "New Europe."

Paris Unit Large

A German concern, it said, has founded a new banking company in Paris called the Aero-Bank. It has a capital of 200,000,000 francs. By comparison, Credit Lyonnais, one of France's largest banks, has a capital of 400,000,000 francs.

"The size of the capital permits a plain conclusion as regards the intended role in Paris banking and therefore in France," it was said. "Hence it follows that French industry will be drawn in increasing measure into the entire continent's production."

In the Balkans Germany's financial giant, the Deutsche Bank, has concluded a "friendship agreement" with the National Bank of Greece at Athens and the Dresdner Bank an accord with the Bank of Athens.

Active in Croatia

The Dresdner Bank also took a place in the banking system of Europe's youngest state, Croatia, by taking over the Yugoslav Bank in Zagreb.

The same trend is developing in newly occupied eastern Europe. In Riga the Dresdner Bank already has founded a new institution called Handels und Kredit Bank. The Commerz Bank opened branches at Riga and Tallinn and the Bank Der Deutschen is represented at Krakow and Riga.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter held that the trend should not be regarded from the viewpoint of "striving towards extension of power but rather as a contribution by Germany towards creation of a continental European economy."

Clews May Spare Hostages

By the United Press

Vichy, Oct. 26.—The government announced tonight that French informants have furnished clews to the assassinations of two German army officers, raising the hope that the Germans might spare 100 hostages from a retributive death.

Pierre Pucheu, Vichy minister of interior, arrived in Paris to await Adolf Hitler's response to a plea by Marshal Petain on behalf of the hostages, doomed unless the slayers of Nazi occupation officials at Nantes and Bordeaux are caught.

A communique announcing that "French persons" had handed over clews to the killings said German military authorities rewarded them, after they had refused material awards, with the release of their relatives from German prison camps.

The same reward was dangled by the Germans before the relatives of all French war prisoners in Germany for help in apprehending the Bordeaux and Nantes assailants.

The clews were said to concern the organizers of such a plot and not the actual slayers. But police believed that if they could round up those responsible, they could track down the killers.

The ultimatum demanding the lives of 50 more hostages at Nantes expires at midnight Monday and the identical ultimatum in the Bordeaux case expires at midnight Wednesday.

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—City officials of Nancy in occupied France have been forbidden to engage in political activity, "either on or off duty," under threat of dismissal, the official news agency D. N. B. reported today in a dispatch from Paris.

The order, pronounced by the mayor, requires city officials and employes to sign a statement assuring that they "are neither Communists nor De Gaulle (Free French) supporters" and that they will follow loyally Marshal Petain's directions.

The move was regarded in some Berlin quarters as intended to forestall compliance with the five-minute standstill strike called for Friday by Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the Free French leader, in protest against the German execution of French hostages.

There was no authorized German comment on De Gaulle's call for the strike, made by radio yesterday.

German occupying authorities announced the execution last Thursday of Pierre Lerein, a Frenchman of Fiorac, of the unoccupied zone, for possession of weapons and explosives without a permit.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The German radio today took issue with President Roosevelt's condemnation of the mass killing of hostages in occupied France and declared the reprisals were a "justified military measure."

"In connection with the shooting of hostages by the German military authorities in France, President Roosevelt made a declaration in which he condemned this measure," said the broadcast.

"Obviously, the American President forgets that the French Terrorists, at whom these German reprisals are aimed, have only acted on his orders, as well as on directions by Churchill and De Gaulle.

"Instead of criticizing a justified military measure, Roosevelt would do better to keep silent."

Rumanians Send Jews To Ukraine

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Oct. 26.—Jews living in Bessarabia and Bucovina are being banished by Rumanian authorities into ghettoes established in the neighborhood of the Bug River in the Russian Ukraine, the official news agency Rador announced today.

Before Rumania was partitioned by Russia and Hungary it was estimated that at least 385,000 of Rumania's 850,000 Jews were living in Bessarabia and Bucovina, the parts annexed by the Soviet last year. However, there was no official estimate of the number of Jews living there now.

The change involves transfer of Jews to new homes 100 or more miles eastward from their present domiciles. A part of the lower Ukraine, with Odessa as a capital, recently was declared a Rumanian administrative district.

(A Berlin dispatch of October 15 said 2000 Jewish families in the German capital also had been told to be ready to evacuate and to list their minimum needs in clothing. The dispatch said the Jews, hearing that large numbers of their coreligionists in Prague and Vienna already had been sent to Poland and Russia, feared a similar fate was in store for them.)

Revealed by Antonescu

The shipment of Jews into distant ghettoes was disclosed by publication of a letter from Marshal Ion Antonescu, Rumanian chief of state, answering a protest by the president of Rumania's Jewish communities.

"You speak of tragedy and make an appeal in favor of the Jews," the chief of state wrote. "I understand your grief. You should have promptly understood the grief of the entire Rumanian nation. Consider that we have paid with our blood for the hate of your fellow believers in Bessarabia, Odessa, Marasow."

Antonescu then listed his charges against Jews living in the two provinces.

Before Soviet troops occupied Bessarabia and Bucovina, he said, Jews "tore off our officers' shoulder straps, murdered our soldiers, received the Soviet troops with flowers."

He accused the Jews of turning into informers against the Rumanians "during the Communistic terror" that followed the Soviet occupation, and of "inciting Soviet troops in Odessa to useless murder merely to cause us losses" during the two-month siege of that Black Sea naval base and port.

Removal of Czech Jews Awaited

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—Belief that Jews would soon be removed from the cities and villages of the German protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia was expressed today by the usually well-informed Krakow newspaper, Krakauer Zeitung.

British Mass Meetings Cry For Invasion

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 26.—A crowd of 10,000 at a labor-sponsored demonstration demanding "all aid for Russia" shouted down government speakers in London's Trafalgar Square today with cries for a "western front offensive."

While representatives of British and Russian labor unions pledged in Russia a mutual support in the fight against Hitler, workers' meetings both in London and in Coventry swelled the clamor of the British public for all-out aid to Russia with demands for more work and for positive action.

A mixed crowd of Communists, Socialists, representatives of several London labor councils and soldiers and sailors on leave jammed Trafalgar Square and heckled speakers supporting the present policy of the government.

"Take her away," the crowd shouted at Miss Ellen Wilkinson, parliamentary secretary for the ministry of home security, a laborite and a noted leader in social work. Another speaker who objected to the inference that the government was not doing its best under the circumstances was greeted with shouts of disapproval and cries of "western front offensive!"

The meeting noisily adopted a resolution asserting the British people's determination that the greatest practical help be given the Soviet Union with all possible speed. The meeting ended with cheers for the Soviet Union and with singing of "The Red Flag."

In Coventry 6000 women workers called upon the government "to relieve the pressure upon our brave Soviet allies and thus speed the day of victory."

The Sunday pictorial printed two pages of pictures today showing thousands attending dog races and horse shows and using government cars for pleasure trips with the caption "Russia fights grimly on, but in Britain we call this total war."

Announcement that British and Russian trade unions had pledged themselves to a joint effort was made by the Moscow radio. They said they intend to make "the greatest industrial effort for a maximum output of tanks, aircraft, guns and other war equipment."

The program was adopted by representatives of the British conference of trade unions and the Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions.

A joint statement said unanimous agreement was reached on these additional points:

Cooperation of British and Soviet trade unions for organization of mutual aid in the war against Germany.

Support by trade unions of the governments of Great Britain and the Soviet Union in the common struggle against Hitlerism.

Joint employment of all means of agitation and propaganda such as radio, films and workers' gatherings.

Organization of mutual assistance among trade unions to increase personal contact between representatives of the trades union council and the Central Council of Trade Unions of the Soviet Union.

Rise in Prices Pares Surplus Farm Stocks

Advancing farm prices and improving demand growing out of the defense program are enabling the Government to reduce its huge stocks of surplus agricultural products.

The stocks, which six months ago represented an investment of more than $1,350,000,000 in public funds, include cotton, wheat, corn barley, rye, tobacco, grain sorghums, dairy products, and dried fruits. They were accumulated under Government loans to growers.

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that during the last six months, farmer-borrowers had reclaimed over four million bales of cotton and 117 million bushels of corn by paying their loans. Sharply advancing prices made it profitable for them to pay the loans and sell the cotton or corn on the open market.

Wheat loan stocks, on the other hand, increased from 94 million to 229 million bushels.

Despite the cotton and corn liquidations, the Government continues to hold large quantities of farm products. The loan value on September 30 of these products which farmers still could reclaim was $438,294,846. Products owned outright by the Government as a result of loan foreclosures were valued at $823,406,368.

The largest item continues to be cotton, of which the Government owned about 6,120,000 bales with a book value of about $358,609,000. Its corn holdings were 165,359,000 bushels valued at $124,066,764. Wheat owned by the Government totaled 173,916,000 bushels and was valued at $168,183,000, while that stored under loans which growers still have the right to redeem had a loan value of $235,422,000.

The department explained that wheat stocks had increased because of this year's bumper crop and the fact that the loan rate has generally been higher than market prices.

Government stocks of flue-cured tobacco, purchased from the 1939 crop to support a market demoralized by withdrawal of British buyers unable to obtain American dollar exchange and shipping space, is now being made available to the British under the lend-lease program. The department said 65,000,000 pounds of the 160,000,000 pounds bought by the Government from the 1939 crop already had been delivered to British buyers.

In another Agriculture Department action, butter and fresh pork were added. To the list of items obtainable under the stamp plan of the surplus marketing administration.

Department officials explained that increased production, partly as a response to pleas to increase food supplies for aid to friendly foreign powers, had resulted in some temporary surplus of the two items. This, they said, resulted in a decision to add butter and fresh pork to the list of foods available to low-income families. The lists are changed from time to time.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

LIBERACE MAY BE MAESTRO. After pianist Walter Liberace leaves the Neptune Room on November 7, he will be the center of highly ambitious plans laid by the Music Corporation of America, which, it is understood, is figuring on the creation of a new orchestra headed by Liberace, now regarded as one of the country's finest pianists. This is of high interest, since M.C.A. is also the sponsor of pianist-maestro Carmen Cavallaro, whose orchestra has broken all records for popularity at the Cosmos Room both this season and last . . . If you want to hear how Walter sounds with an orchestra, listen to his new stunt of playing in conjunction with a recording of the London Symphony Orchestra. He synchronizes his own performance with that of Arthur Rubenstein, of the symphony. One hearer said, "Goodness, if you shut your eyes, you'll think you're at a Watergate concert."

Sparky Donato, pianist-trumpeter with Dick Koens' Mayflower Lounge, has just married Martha Jane Pacina, one of the cutest of the Capitol Theater Rockets. But even more remarkable is the fact that the newlyweds found an apartment on the same day they were married.

HALLOWEEN PLUS ANNIVERSARY. A double-barreled celebration of both Halloween and its third anniversary will be held in the Cafe Caprice on Friday night. There'll be noisemakers and fancy hats galore, also a giant birthday cake to be cut at midnight and distributed in large hunks to all customers . . . Don Carper's Four will become five tomorrow with the addition of boogie woogie pianist Gene Steinbach, who's been with Tommy Tucker's orchestra for the last two years.

NEW TROIKA STARS. Stuart and Lee, dancers who've just closed at the Radio City Music Hall, open at the Troika tonight . . . Next week Troika will present Carol King, ballet star of "The Gay White Way," who is now appearing at Ben Marden's Riviera.

THE "HALLOWEEN REVUE" will march into the Lotus today, get a big head start toward the huge All Hallows party next Friday night. Dell Ohrel, stepping star of the "Follies Bergere," will head the show. Barrie and King, ballroom dancers who recently closed at Manhattan's St. Regis; Duke Art, jr., a really dizzy young comic, and the Eight Catherine Behny Dancers, who do a variety of clever specialties, round out a big show. Songs by our town's own Buddy Shaner and Bunny Hare.

Dancing will start at 9:30 in the Metronome Room, beginning tonight. This is a half-hour earlier than formerly. Reason for the change is the way scads of people have been coming in early to step to Layton Bailey's music.

RIVIERA'S LOVELY VISITORS. Perched in the Lounge Riviera in the small hours lately were three beauteous night spot singers—Betty Bryant, of the Mayflower Lounge; Mary Byrne, of Mayfair, and Maxine, who recently appeared at the Troika . . . An especially gorgeous recent party at Riviera was the one given by Monroe Hunter in honor of Peggy Lansdowne and Conway Hunt, who will be married on November 8. All the members of the wedding party were present.

MOST BRILLIANTLY ARRAYED musicians in town are the rumba units at the Versailles, Copocabana and Madrillon. The shining satins and ruffles of Jack Fernandez's boys at the Versailles make a rainbow seem inane. Phil Vidal and his Copocabana rhythm crew go in for those big ruffled sleeves, too. Nifty and colorful also, but in the Russian manner, are the gleaming satin blouses worn by the Plymouth's gypsy ensemble.

SHOREHAM PERSONALITIES. The rosy personage who says "Welcome home!" so cordially (even if he's never seen you before) when you get out of a cab at the Shoreham is carriage starter Swanner. . . . Among the assistants of Maitre d'Hotel Robert Kehl are Paul, who's tall, dark and handsome and has two children; Ernest, who's a splendid judge of classic music; Harry, who's a card!

The Casino Royal is holding over its topnotch Sharon Lynn revue, one of the finest it's ever presented. . . . And look out for the Casino Royal's big doings on Halloween night. They plan to uncork fun unlimited.

MAYFAIR AT MIDNIGHT. Eileen Ritter, of the Earle Theater, looking verra little girlish in a pink sweater with a round white collar . . . Paul Kain clarineting "Time on My Hands" with dexterous trickery . . . Sammy Ferro putting

DON CARPER, smart young maestro at the Cafe Caprice. In upper picture is Bunny Hare, diverting new swingstress with Bill Strickland's band at the Lotus bubbles into "Blue Champagne" with his trombone . . . Distinguished looking Leo telling customers what life holds in store. They say he averages a thousand readings a month . . . Promotion Manager Jimmy Byrd saying, "Tell everybody we're going to have a Halloween party with a real bang."

TALLEST GIRL SINGER hereabouts is Helen Standish appearing in Paul Young's Romany Room. She accents her height by wearing slim black gowns. Helen did some extra-extra warbling at the Romany party for Mr. and Mrs. Al Spieldock, since Mrs. Spieldock is Singer Helen Forrest (formerly of Benny Goodman's band) in professional life. In the group were Eileen O'Neill and Tommy Johnson, of Burt's Trans-Lux who were rejoicing about Tommy's new electric organ.

Van Taylor, the "big boy singer" of Restaurant "823," has reduced 40 pounds in the last few weeks. He's now down to 260 . . . "823" is another spot that's going to toss a Halloween party stupendous.

HI HAT PICTURE. Oscar's wearing a new "V" pin in tricolor on a gold background . . . His assistant, Denny Calvert, tells us that tomorrow will mark his first anniversary in Hi Hat . . . Jimmy Summerville is singing "Toujours l'Amour," of all things! . . . Singer Carmela Lazari says she's bought a new orange chiffon evening dress. Yes, sir! It's for the Hi Hat Halloween party.

A BIG SURPRISE is coming to pretty Dot Garcy and Mary Lopez when they open with their songs and mimicry at the Brown Derby tonight. New performers at the Derby are always plumb dumbfounded by the strange doings of their boss, Al Simmonds, and George Berg, his partner in insanity. And no wonder! We've been seeing George and Al for years and they still startle the daylights out of us.

ELECTRIFIED ORCHESTRA. One of the new electraharps has been ordered by Melvin Henderson, of Milton Davis' Rainbow Room orchestra. He expects delivery in 30 days. This will make Milt's orchestra one of the most electric in town, since he is already leading from the novachord, which makes music via 1500 tiny electric tubes.

OPM Bans Scarce Metals for Autos

December 15 Set as Deadline for Makers To Find Substitutes to Use in Bright Parts

By the Associated Press

The OPM told the automobile industry yesterday that the use of scarce metals—such a chrome, nickel and aluminum—for passenger car ornaments must be discontinued December 15.

Effective immediately, under an order by Donald M. Nelson, priorities director, production of such ornaments was prohibited except in amounts required to complete cars which will come off the assembly lines prior to December 15.

The order specifically bars use of bright work, bright finish, metal finish or body trim containing aluminum, copper, nickel or chrome, but provides that special exemptions may be granted for plating bumpers and bumper guard assemblies.

Many Items Affected

Manufacturers now use the vital defense metals for a wide variety of items, such as windshield wipers, window molding, lamps, exterior and interior body trim, handles, parts of instrument panels, steering wheels, radiator grilles, hub caps, license plate holders, mirrors, horns, heater units, radio equipment and collapsible top assemblies.

An OPM announcement declared that "what the future automobile will look like with elimination of bright work will depend upon the resourcefulness of the manufacturer" but added that the industry was expected to devise substitute materials which would enable automobiles "to retain a pleasing appearance."

Job Losses Forecast

One important effect of the order may be substantial business losses and employment dislocation for suppliers of automotive gadgets. The OPM's labor division said it was looking into this question with a view to transferring workers to defense jobs as swiftly as possible. Such manufacturers, it said, will be given special consideration in the placing of defense contracts.

In another order yesterday, the OPM asked industry to simplify structural steel shapes and avoid delaying steel mills with small orders for odd-sized beams, channels and angles not in general use. It proposed that the number of angle shapes be reduced 50 per cent, and the number of types of beams, channels and other shapes cut nearly as much.

Munshower Takes New Post Today

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Oct. 26.—Col. Elmer E. Munshower, former superintendent of Maryland State Police, will be transferred tomorrow from the 115th Infantry to become inspector general of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Division commander, said today. Col. Munshower is over age in grade as colonel as well as lieutenant colonel and is slated for relief from active service in February.

As inspector general he will replace Maj. Norman C. Atwood, former executive officer of the District's 121st Engineers, who will become executive officer of the 176th Field Artillery with the rank of lieutenant colonel. Maj. Atwood will succeed Lieut. Col. Karl W. Curtis, who will replace Lieut. Col. John Nash as commander of the 176th Field Artillery.

Col. Nash, over age in grade as lieutenant colonel and colonel, has been ordered to the War Department in Washington for duty in the Bureau of Public Relations. A regular Army officer, he assumed command of the division's medium artillery regiment last February when Col. Arthuh P. Schock was rendered inactive by a physical disability.

Col. Munshower enlisted as a private in the Maryland National Guard in 1906 and served through the World War as a captain of infantry. He is a native of Maryland.

Private Robert E. Neathery, of Burkeville, Va., 114th Infantry, Forty-fourth Division, was critically injured and a civilian was killed instantly near Camden, S. C., today when an Army command truck left the road and struck a tree. Private Neathery was rushed to a Camden hospital for treatment of a skull fracture.

The civilian was identified as Ralph Sanders, 28, of Camden. A second soldier, Private Steve Nagey, of Fords, N. J., suffered severe shock in the crash. Army authorities were investigating tonight to determine why Sanders was riding in a military vehicle.

The Twenty-ninth Division will move out of its base camp after 6 a. m. tomorrow to take position in the line of the Second Army Corps opposing the Sixth Corps across the Pee Dee and Rocky Rivers. During the day a situation is expected to develop which will require one corps to make a river crossing against opposition before the week of field exercises is concluded.

The Second, flushed with completed and repeated victory over the the First Corps last week, will face this week the veteran division of the United States Army—the First. In continuous existence since the World War, the First Division recently has taken part in a series of maneuvers, including ship-to-shore exercises with the Navy and Marine Corps. Also in the Sixth Corps is the Twenty-sixth Division, first National Guard division to face the enemy in the World War.

Note of Patriotism Is Stressed At Opening of Carroll Forum

The unselfish patriotism of Charles Carroll, Revolutionary War statesman and patriot, should be the pattern for all true Americans to follow in these critical days, the Right Rev. Msgr. Peter Guilday, of the Catholic University of America, said yesterday at the opening of the Charles Carroll Forum of Washington, Inc., at the Hotel Willard.

Sponsored by a group of prominent local Catholics to present the Catholic position on the present world crisis, the forum was attended by more than 500 persons of various religious faiths. The Rev. Dr. James A. Magner, procurator of Catholic University, introduced Dr. Guilday and presided at the general discussion.

Dr. Guilday praised Carroll as the only Catholic signer of the Declaration of Independence, one of Washington's closest friends, and as "Maryland's staunchest son when the Tory element at Annapolis was determined on reunion with England."

"Popular idol of his State and probably the wealthiest man in the American colonies, he pledged all—his life, his fortune and his sacred honor—in the cause of American independence," asserted the speaker.

Introducing the speaker, the Rev. Magner, chairman of the forum, said, in part:

"In these days of international strife and national indecision, it is important that we study again and keep well in mind the great principles of the founding fathers of our Republic. Foremost among those principles are the freedom of worship and religious expression and universal free participation in civic affairs."

Sir Philip Gibbs will address the forum on November 23 at 3:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel.

25,000 Participate in Catholic Celebration

LINING Constitution Avenue from Fourth to Fifteenth Street and thronging the slopes of the Monument Grounds in a mosaic of colors, almost 25,000 Washingtonians joined yesterday in celebrating the Catholic Feast of Christ the King.

A mile-long parade representing 54 District Catholic parishes and 36 religious orders at Catholic University followed by a solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament from the stage of the Sylvan Theater marked the observance of the feast which was this year dedicated by Pope Pius XII to prayers for the restoration of world peace.

Superintendent of Police Edward J. Kelly, riding alone in the rear of an open car, led the procession down Constitution Avenue, followed by a motorcycle escort and a color guard from the Holy Name Society of the Army Medical Center.

THE MOST Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore and Washington, and rector of St. Gabriel's Church here, who later officiated at the Benediction, followed the color guard in a second car, and then went to the reviewing stand at the corner of Fifteenth Street to watch as the rest of the parade passed.

The marchers streamed past the stand for more than an hour. More than a score of bands played music that ranged from hymns to Stephen Foster medleys and military marches. Among them was the St. John's College Band with the full college cadet corps, the Fort Stevens American Legion Post drum and bugle corps, and the National Odd Fellows Negro Band which was led by 5-year-old Alvin Cauley, toddling at the head in a white drum-major's uniform.

A variety of uniforms, including the Kelly green of the Irish War Veterans and the blue-gray of the Catholic War Veterans, flashed color among the thousands of marching Catholic laymen from the Washington parishes, together with hundreds of American flags and religious banners.

THE SERVICES at the Monument Grounds followed, with marchers and spectators crowding together in the crisp October sunshine between the white needle of the Monument and the foliage backdrop of the theater stage.

A plea for spiritual foundations to give meaning to our material defense effort was made in the sermon, which was delivered by the Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O. P., assistant professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

"It can only be by a return to the feet of Christ—the King of Kings, King over our minds, King of our Hearts," he declared, "by being fed on the substantial food of His teaching, and by making these truths course through our lives as life-giving nourishment that we can say we have something worth defending."

And finally, in golden vestments, the Bishop together with the Rev. Michael M. Hyle and the Rev. Charles Gorman, conducted the Benediction, with the St. John's Cadets standing at attention and taps sounding over the heads of the congregation at the moment of blessing.

Daisy Finds a Home

W. J. Couperthwaite and Daisy

DAISY was a lady all day yesterday at the Twelfth Precinct Station. Today she will join her feathered friends at the Zoo.

Daisy is the bird which was taken into custody late Saturday by several hefty police who responded to a call of "a wild duck loose at 2824 Twelfth Street Northeast."

AFTER a little scuffle (Daisy forgot she was a lady), she indicated that she'd go quietly, and spent the rest of the night in the station house.

By noon yesterday police at the precinct counted the noses of 68 citizens who said they had lost a duck or would like to own a duck or had been reminded that Thanksgiving is not far off.

But no one could identify Daisy. So, this morning, Daisy will become a boarder at the Zoo.

Congregation Observes Golden Wedding

WEDDING bells rang out again yesterday for Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Berger, 301 Madison Street Northwest, as the congregation of Takoma Lutheran Church at the morning service honored them on their golden wedding anniversary. The anniversary will be Tuesday.

The prelude at the service was Wagner's "Wedding March," from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. Clayton E. Baus, organist. Mrs. Fred J. Wells sang "O Promise Me," and Fred J. Wells gave a violin solo, "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Baus. The organ postlude was Mendelsohn's "Wedding March."

Mrs. Chester Brenneman, sr., presented Mrs. Berger with a basket of yellow-golden roses on behalf of the Ladies Guild, which she heads, and the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, on behalf of the congregation, gave her a copy of Starck's prayer book, first printed in 1725, a hymnbook, and a leather-bound scrap book.

IN THE scrap book were inscribed names of those "wishing the couple well." A transcription of the entire service will be recorded in it this week.

"The Things the Bergers Know About Christian Marriage" was the Rev. Mr. Pfeiffer's sermon theme, in which he said they know it pays to live together in a Christian way, and to have the home close to the church and influenced by the church.

"They also know," said the clergyman, "that it pays to pray in days of happiness and days of difficulty in the home."

Listening to the tributes from their reserved places in the front pew were the Bergers, their daughters, Miss Charlotte Berger, and Mrs. Helen Handley, and two grandsons, Joseph, 9, and Charles, 7. The boys earlier in the service placed the altar flowers.

PHIL JOHNSON, vice president of the congregation, also paid tribute to the Bergers.

Lifelong Washingtonians, Mr. and Mrs. Berger were wed on October 28, 1891, in the old Zion Lutheran Evangelical Church at Sixth and P Streets Northwest. Berger is a retired baker.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells made their contribution to the music service braced by crutches and canes. Mr. Wells broke his heel last June and Mrs. Wells has arthritis.

The church is at Seventh and Dahlia Streets Northwest.

U. S. Envisioned As World Trustee

A key OPM official last night pictured the United States as "a trustee of all nations" in the postwar world, with power to give or deny war materials to countries as it sees fit.

This postwar scene was drawn by Dr. William Y. Elliott, former head of Harvard University's Department of Government and now OPM's deputy chief of stock piles and shipping imports, during the nationally-broadcast "American Forum of the Air" at the Willard Hotel.

He found sharp opposition in Frederick J. Libby, head of the Council for Prevention of War and Representative John M. Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, when he declared:

"At the present time we are drawing on all the raw materials of the British, French, Free French, Dutch and Belgian empires. As long as these are outside Hitler's control we can continue our defense effort. As payment for our aid in saving these empires we ought to acquire voting control in their raw materials as a trustee for all the nations—including Germany, Japan and Italy—once we have secured them against Hitler's control.

"This raw-material control would enable us to do two things. One, we could reconstruct the world with justice and equity by giving access of materials to all nations who would disarm. Two, by pooling these materials under an international system of control, we could withhold the strategic materials from anyone who insisted on rearming in order to repeat the aggression of Hitler in the future."

Retorted Vorys: "That sounded imperialistic and Frank Knoxy to me, the way you put it."

Such a postwar state, declared Libby, would make for "an American peace imposed upon the world."

Clark Eichelberger, national chairman of the Committee to Defend America, joined Elliott in insisting that no lasting peace could be formulated until Hitler had been defeated.

"If the Nazis win," declared Eichelberger, "we are doomed to a life of misery and slavery. If we defeat them and have the courage to write a good peace and enforce it, our generation . . . may see before it passes on the beginning of a golden age of human happiness and idealism way beyond our fondest dreams."

Vorys and Libby, on the other hand, called for a negotiated peace.

"An American peace offensive this winter, whether successful or not, would tend to unite our people and separate the German people from their leaders," declared Vorys.

"There can be no peace if there is victory on either side," said Libby. "It cannot be, we or they, but must be, we and they."

Air Force Large In Philippines

Indications that the Army now has a large and powerful air force in the Philippines were seen yesterday in the assignment of a major general to command aviation groups there.

The Army disclosed that Maj. Gen. Louis H. Brereton had been transferred from command of a bombardment wing at Savannah, Ga., to the Philippine post and was on his way there. Although only 51 years old, Brereton is a veteran of the Army's aviation branch. He was a flier in the World War.

While the Army has withheld details, there have been repeated intimations that the Philippine bastion of this Nation's defenses was being greatly augmented.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, told a Congressional committee last month that the Philippines were getting "No. 1" priority on arms—presumably on aircraft as well as other weapons.

New Dealers Out to Rebuild Party in N. Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—A group of 30 New Dealers calling themselves The New Deal Democracy expressed belief today that reelection of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia was assured and announced a program to rebuild the Democratic Party in New York and Jersey City.

The Independent Committee said in a statement issued by Chairman Raymond Marriner Schwartz that "the campaign is now over as far as Mr. O'Dwyer (William O'Dwyer, Brooklyn District Attorney and LaGuardia's Democratic opponent) and Tammany are concerned, Mayor LaGuardia is in."

"The New Deal Democracy will now proceed with the formation of the 'Independent New Deal Committee to rebuild the Democratic Party in New York City, we are already preparing for the 1942 gubernatorial campaign and Congressional elections and will cooperate 100 per cent with the American Labor party.

"Plans are under way to carry the fight across the Hudson. This is no 'purge.' It is simply a liberal dose of cleaning fluid to clean out a few remaining blots in the Democratic Party here and there. New York City is the first place selected for rebuilding the Democratic Party along more progressive lines."

The committee said plans were being made to oppose Frank Hague, Democratic Mayor of Jersey City, on behalf of Governor Charles Edison of New Jersey, with whom Hague has split.

Schwartz released the statement in connection with joint indorsement of LaGuardia by Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, and Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia, acting on behalf of the group.

President Roosevelt already has indorsed LaGuardia.

Seditious Conspiracy Trial Opens Today in Minneapolis

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Oct. 26.—Trial of 28 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy against the United States Government is scheduled to start in Federal Court here Monday, an outgrowth of raids last June on Socialist workers party headquarters in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The indictments are the first under the Smith Act passed in 1940 covering conspiracy in advocating overthrow of the existing governmental order, and were voted against 29 persons July 15.

One of those indicted, Grant Dunne, officer of General Drivers Union 544, which bolted from A. F. of L. to C. I. O. shortly before the raids, committed suicide a month ago. Fifteen of those indicted were officers and members of C. I. O. 544.

The Government, in the indictments, charges:

"The defendants would seek to bring about, whenever the time seemed to them propitious, an armed revolution against the Government of the United States. Said armed revolution would be brought about and joined in by the workers and laborers and farmers of the United States."

Henry Schweinhaut, special prosecutor, declared a "test mobilization" was held by the Minneapolis S. W. P. unit and charged the group held target practice in the basement of the old drivers union headquarters.

The indictments also charge S. W. P. Party members sought key jobs in leading industries.

The same secrecy that shrouded the Government investigation into the S. W. P. cloaked pretrial activity, with the district attorney's office declining to indicate how many witnesses will be summoned to testify.

Savini, with two other men, was arrested by another army officer while in illegal possession of 150 liters of olive oil. The others escaped but Savini was shot while trying to swim across a stream.

Hope Eternal

The House voted the other day, with obvious good sense, to relieve the Senate of the burden of trying impeachment cases against Federal district and circuit judges. Under the bill by Representative Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, articles of impeachment hereafter brought against such judges would be referred to certain designated courts. Patently the Senate has no time to sit as a judicial body in such cases. Mr. Sumners' committee, in reporting the bill, rightly said that it is "a governmental absurdity that the cumbersome machinery of impeachment must be resorted to in order to procure the ouster of a district or circuit judge." The House agreed. This action revives hope that some day the House may even discover that it is a governmental absurdity for a national legislature composed of 531 members to insist on enacting bills to name streets, grant various licenses and regulate other petty municipal affairs of the District of Columbia.

Greenbelt Houses

Washington's acute housing shortage is to be relieved in some measure by the construction of a thousand houses for defense workers at Greenbelt. The first 152 units will soon be opened for occupancy and work on almost as many more is going forward under direction of the Farm Security Administration. Since this project is being financed through the Lanham Act, the houses will be available only to enlisted men, employes in the War and Navy Departments assigned to duty at reservations, posts or bases, and to workers in industries essential to defense. It is difficult to understand why the Government's own employes engaged in defense work outside of military stations should have been excluded from this list.

A bill to amend the Lanham Act, which provides Federal aid for defense housing, is now before the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The Washington Housing Association makes the pertinent suggestion that a further amendment be included to open such housing to Government employes whose work is essential to defense. Some employes brought here for important work have resigned and gone home because they could find no suitable housing for their families. Others are living in insanitary and overcrowded quarters. Certainly there should be no discrimination against such defense workers merely because they are employed directly by the Government in the Nation's Capital.

Navy Day

The burden of comment on this, of all Navy Days, will almost certainly be concentrated on the remarkable progress of the naval shipbuilding program. And rightly so, for since the war began 135 fighting ships have been added to the fleet. This achievement is, of course, a major industrial feat and represents the brightest aspect of the preparedness effort. What it means right now, moreover, in terms of bolstering the Nation's first line of defense, is scarcely comprehended by the layman with scant conception of the magnitude of the Navy's patrol function. From the tropical Zulu Sea to the icy North Atlantic American warships, some of them commissioned within the year, are on war duty. Without recent additions to the fleet a patrol on such a vast scale would be a patrol in name only.

Indeed, from the Navy's viewpoint the number of vessels available for patrol is still dangerously inadequate. But it is an inadequacy which will be lessened as rapidly as is humanly possible. Now building or scheduled to be built are 347 more fighting ships. When these are completed—and hardly a week passes without new launchings or commissionings—there will be considerably less question of the Navy's ability to patrol the seas wherever necessary.

Appropriate though it is to mark shipbuilding progress, it is equally fitting to acknowledge that in less troubled times the Nation possessed enough tough-minded realists to force an expanded shipbuilding program. Not so long ago it was the custom, whenever a naval expert expressed his views, to trot out the handiest and usually the nastiest innuendoes about the naval mind and its shortcomings. Even as recently as 18 months ago there was the complaint of a Senator who opposed a two-ocean navy: "Navy men always need something; no matter how many ships they have, it's not enough." Nobody, of course, not even a Navy man, would deny that.

But if such senatorial spirit had prevailed back in 1937, when naval expansion was up for debate, we should hardly have been able to add more combatant vessels to the fleet in the last two years than were built in the entire period between the Disarmament Conference of 1922 and 1937. In the light of recent events failure to expand would have entailed consequences for which, thankfully, we shall not have to answer. To its realists, then, on this Navy Day, the Nation is especially grateful.

Mr. Lewis Vs. Defense

John L. Lewis has taken a stand in defiance of the United States. His letter to the President and the subsequent strike of the United Mine Workers brush aside all previous issues in the controversy. By his arbitrary refusal to abandon coercion in this critical period, he has laid before the Government a challenge which it cannot fail to accept. For what Mr. Lewis proposes to do, if his demands are not granted, is to thwart the will of the American people to arm themselves for defense.

It is important to note in passing that Mr. Lewis has no legitimate issue. His controversy with the operators of the so-called "captive" coal mines which serve the Nation's steel industry involves only the union's demand for a closed shop. Obviously no such issue should be raised when the country is straining every nerve to produce tanks, ships, planes and guns for the defense of human freedom. Congress and the Administration have been negligent in failing to adopt a general policy to discourage shifts to or away from the closed shop under the pressure of war conditions. But even in the absence of a well defined national policy no group, in the midst of a crisis, can reasonably demand a monopoly on jobs vital to defense.

Having raised this improper issue, Mr. Lewis then refused to compromise. He has stubbornly rejected the requests of the National Defense Mediation Board and the President that the dispute be submitted to arbitration. In other words, Mr. Lewis has made it plain that he doesn't care to have the controversy settled by fair and peaceful means. He insists that the steel companies operating the "captive" mines, and the Government as well, capitulate to his demands.

The magnitude of this threat needs little emphasis. The closing of these mines will deny coal to companies that are producing more than 80 per cent of the Nation's steel for defense. Some may be able to obtain fuel from other sources, but it is intimated that Mr. Lewis would counter such a move by a general strike of miners. In effect he has told the Government that his demands must be granted or he will sabotage the armament program.

It is not yet clear how the Government will meet this threat. Its powers of persuasion have been virtually exhausted. Even the President's appeal that work go forward while an adjustment is further sought has been ruthlessly turned down, though it may be that his continued conciliatory efforts, notably his attempt to arrange a meeting between Myron C. Taylor and Mr. Lewis, will somehow avert a lengthy strike. The one thing certain is that the challenge must be met and met with vigor that will discourage any future attempt to frustrate the national will for selfish purposes. If it becomes necessary to order the mines reopened, there can be little doubt that a majority of the miners will return to their jobs when assured adequate protection. The responsibility for any unfortunate consequence resulting from any policy that may be necessary to keep fuel flowing into steel factories will rest solely on the shoulders of Mr. Lewis.

Apparently Mr. Lewis is still afflicted by the illusion summed up in the words "business as usual." For his own sake and that of the workers he represents he ought to wake up to current realities. The United States simply will not permit its output of arms to be halted by any hard-boiled employers or union leaders attempting to take advantage of the emergency. And a wise leader in either sphere would not be asking for a physical demonstration of this essential policy.

Repeal At Last

By voting to repeal the remaining important provisions of the Neutrality Act that prevent us from giving all-out aid to the enemies of Hitler the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has simply faced the realities of the situation. That is admitted by even so staunch a supporter of neutrality legislation as Senator George, who now favors the committee's broadened amendment in place of the House-approved measure to arm merchantmen. When Congress passed the Neutrality Act, preventing Americans from exercising their traditional right to freedom of the seas, it mistakenly assumed that this voluntary surrender of our rights would prevent our involvement in war. Subsequent events have demonstrated the falsity of that assumption. Not only have our restricted neutral rights been violated, but we ourselves have forfeited our neutral status deliberately and willingly by extending aid to the enemies of Nazilism. We have made no secret of our conviction that Hitler and the system he represents is a threat to our most cherished institutions. So there is no point whatever in clinging to self-imposed restrictions that leave our unarmed merchantmen a prey to Nazi raiders, keep our ships out of the harbors of nations we have pledged ourselves to aid and force us to employ foreign flag vessels to transport munitions and supplies to those who are fighting Hitler.

It is generally acknowledged that the Neutrality Act has not prevented us from doing many things that would warrant a declaration of war, if Hitler should consider such declaration expedient. But the act has seriously hampered the Administration in the conduct of its foreign policy. That policy unquestionably has the support of a majority of the American people, now that they have come to understand the irreconcilable nature of the conflict and to realize our own stake in the outcome. Delay in lifting the restrictions of the Neutrality Act has meant delay in giving the full aid of which we are capable to the beleaguered British and other nations fighting aggression. It also has slowed down defense preparations on the home front because our pseudo-neutral status has interfered with a clear definition of our objectives. We cannot afford to pretend any longer. Congress should now face the issue without flinching. The Nation is prepared, undoubtedly, to support a repeal measure that will restore our lost liberty of action. The Foreign Relations Committee has shown sound judgment in presenting this broad issue to the Senate today, instead of following the more cautious lead of the Administration in striving for piecemeal revision. By acting now we shall be able to speed up and extend the aid we have promised to give to others, as well as to stimulate our own defense efforts.

ILO Conference

The International Labor Conference which holds its opening session in New York today provides a hopeful reminder that not all vestiges of internationalism have been swept away by war. The world turmoil has, of course, brought about many changes in the membership of the International Labor Organization as well as the transfer of its working headquarters from Geneva to Montreal. Germany withdrew from the I. L. O. as early as 1935; Italy at the end of 1939; Japan, about a year later. Soviet Russia's status became uncertain due to severance of connections with the League of Nations. And, of course, the countries overrun by Germany can no longer be represented directly.

However, some of the best known statesmen of the European governments in exile are attending the I. L. O. conference this year. Most of the Latin American countries are sending full delegations. The British delegates are men of outstanding importance, including the leader of the Labor Party, Maj. Clement R. Attlee. Canada and other parts of the Empire will be well represented. Not only does this gathering bring together people from all parts of the globe; the delegates also come as representatives of governments, of employers and of workers. This tripartite structure gives the deliberations a weight that would not attach to a conference representing more restricted interests.

The discussion this year will be devoted largely to examination of methods of collaboration between public authorities, workers' and employers' organizations, in furtherance of national defense policies. Since those national defense policies aim at the overthrow of aggressor powers, it may seem that the I. L. O. has been transformed from a peaceful organization devoted to the cause of human betterment into an instrumentality for helping to wage wars. In a sense that is true. But the aims of the I. L. O. could not be attained in an Axis-dominated world. Its ideal of "economic security for all, achieved in a manner which respects individual dignity and liberty," can never be approached unless the democratic nations win the struggle against totalitarianism. When they win, there will be need and opportunity for a broader, more universal approach to the social and economic problems that are the proper concern of a truly international organization. The I. L. O. is already looking forward to that time, considering the essentials of a reconstruction program and the part that it can play in assisting the restoration of shattered economics.

THE NECESSITY

Fisherman have left their nets crisscrossed on the sand,
Ploughs tilt in the furrow, factory gates are barred;
Dark lies the land beneath the winter stars.

Still the living rise at break of day,
Bend to the floor, lace the shoe,
Pass through the door and down the unknown street.

Men say there is power in the coming of days one after another;
The coming of time brings death; the days are long.
Yet in unknown winters men gather together, grow strong,
(In spring the sun returns with the green leaves of corn)
And many children are born . . . what else shall we believe?

Helping Russia

It is heartening to note that steps are finally being taken to see to it that aid to the Soviet Union is more than a paper pledge. The plan to use the northern route with the added protection of convoys is a step forward.

It seems to me that we might borrow the successfully executed idea of the British in setting aside a week during which all plane and tank production be set aside for the U. S. S. R.—an idea which is gaining support from the labor movement.

In view of the fact that the people of the Soviet Union are at this time bearing the brunt of the fight against Hitlerism, the least we can do is to exert every possible force to the end that they be adequately equipped. A READER.

Serpent

Sometime ago Hitler was pictured as a serpent preying on mortals, and the illustration conveyed the idea that he is a serpent in human form. Whether or not he is a subject of the reputed Old Serpent or is that sinister One himself, there are doubtlessly many serpents in human form in Germany and elsewhere, doing ill deeds. Indeed, it has been supposed that long ago there was a generation of vipers in human form.

For some years past I have developed a dislike for all serpents, and while I may not have the ability or power to tread on all of them, I have had some prayers answered, and so I shall pray that all ungodly serpents, in human form or otherwise, be given fervent heat and consumed, so they never again can annoy any righteous person.

If Hitler is such an especially obnoxious sinning snake as he has been pictured, may he be the first to be burned, and then the rest of the fiery task may be a sinecure.

I do not know that anyone cares to join me in my prayer, which may not be regarded as Christian, but we shall see what we shall see.

Currier Case

I hope that Mark Sullivan's readers detected his attempt to muddy the waters in the Currier contract case. By the use of the slick art of semantics, he attacks the witness instead of the witness' testimony. He seeks to inflame his readers by an appeal to their emotions and prejudices.

For instance a good deal of his column was devoted to an unfavorable physical description of Hillman, who was described as a man who gestured "not merely with his hands but with the whole of his chunky body." "His voice was forceful, in pitch almost gutteral." He was characterized as loud-mouthed and ill-bred. He interrupted his questioners. He was attended by flunkies bearing documents.

In contrast to this, Hugh Fulton, counsel to the Senate Committee investigating defense contracts, was described as having a "gentle high-pitched voice." Senator Truman, chairman of the committee was "extremely mild mannered and courteous. "When Hillman repeatedly interrupted "he broke in"; when Fulton interrupted he merely "interjected a question."

Suppose Hillman does have a chunky body and a gutteral voice, what of it? Just what do these characteristics have to do with prefabrication or labor stabilization agreements? My thought was that these hearings came under the heading of governmental investigations, and not auditions, or beauty contests. What is Sullivan trying to do, become a journalistic Elizabeth Arden? Price Of Amity

Your editorials in reference to Hamilton Fish and the "smudge" on the Republican part of the isolationist-pacifist-appeaser faction were warmly applauded when read aloud at the club of which the undersigned is a member. You referred to the misinterpreted quotation from Washington's Farewell Address. Jefferson has been similarly misinterpreted about America refraining from engaging in European "broils"; but the letter in which he used that expression contains the following exhortation which is as appropriate now as it was in 1823:

America, North and South, has a set of interests distinct from those of Europe, and peculiarly her own. She should, therefore, have a system of her own, separate and apart from that of Europe. While the last is laboring to become the domicile of despotism, our endeavor should surely be to make our hemisphere that of freedom. One nation, most of all, could disturb us in this pursuit. She now offers to lead, aid, and accompany us in it. By acceding to her proposition, we detach her from the band of despots, bring her mighty weight into the scale of free government, and emancipate at one stroke a whole continent, which might otherwise linger long in doubt and difficulty. Great Britain is the nation which can do us the most harm of any one, or all on earth; and with her on our side we need not fear the whole world. With her, then, we should the most sedulously nourish a cordial friendship; and nothing would tend more to knit our affections than to be fighting once more side by side in the same cause. Not that I would purchase even her amity at the price of taking part in her wars; but the war in which the present proposition might engage us, should that be its consequence, is not her war, but ours.

The tortured excerpts from the Washington and Jefferson papers are constantly used by the Fish-Nye-Wheeler-twin-Clark group who would, it seems, prefer slavery and risk total degradation of soul and body to despotism rather than raise a finger to support a fight for freedom!

Cracking Down

What is the idea of spending millions of dollars for a two-ocean Navy and a large Army if we are not going to use them to maintain the American way of life by protecting our ships and property anywhere in the world? Are the lives of our Navy and Army men any more sacred than our merchant marine men, who go out on unarmed ships to carry on commerce between the United States and other nations, to be sunk by the pirates of the German navy without warning?

The isolationists would have the American people think we are committing a crime to carry out the traditions we have lived by in the past.

Arm our merchant ships and use the Navy to the limit to protect our ships anywhere on the seven seas of the world.

We are losing too much valuable time fooling with labor and isolationists and it is about time Congress cracked down on both and got going. Stop this hellish nonsense and keep the sea lanes open to the commerce of the world at any cost.

How To Improve Local Traffic

My experience includes many years of driving in Washington and incidental or occasional driving in most of the comparable major cities of the country. It leads me to believe and to maintain that traffic conditions in Washington are not outstandingly bad. By that I would not imply that we have no real traffic problems, but I do argue that there is nothing in our situation, with respect to the universal problem, to provoke hysteria or to justify heralding our city to the country as a place where the motorist or the pedestrian ventures upon our streets at the imminent risk of his life.

Modern automotive vehicles are miracles of mechanical perfection and thanks to our inspection law must be kept fit for operation under maximum safety requirements. Therefore, our major problem must lie in the man or woman, boy or girl, behind the wheel, and unfortunately we have no annual or periodic inspection of drivers. Most drivers do measure up to reasonable requirements for intelligent and safe operation of their juggernauts, but there is a substantial minority of them who could not qualify to be entrusted with pushing gocarts in a park meadow. They constitute our number one traffic problem in Washington, just as their kind present the major problem in other cities and on our interurban highways and roads.

It is difficult to deal as drastically or as effectively with bad drivers as we do with bad vehicles. But the effort should be made through tightening our laws and regulations and their more rigid enforcement. It is easy to get an operator's permit, and almost impossible to forfeit one. The reverse, or approximately the reverse, of that should be true. Failing that, it should be possible, however, to accomplish something in the way of educating drivers. Surely something can be done toward teaching them the wisdom and the selfish value of obeying all traffic regulations, which are so simple and easy of observance, and of driving, not solely with the accelerator, the brakes, and the horn, but with an admixture to their gas of patience, alertness, courtesy and reasonable consideration for the rights of others.

And, for general observance, in order to get where you're going when you want to be there, step on your starter two or three minutes earlier instead of trying to make up that time by driving tricks and usurpation once you are in moving traffic. Keep your operator's permit unsullied, your temper unruffled and your car unbattered and unscarred. It can be done.

To relieve traffic congestion, simple immediate expedients are: More north and south boulevards or one-way streets during the rush hours; spread the lights on those streets during rush hours; permit entering or crossing of boulevard traffic only at lights; keep trucks, vans and all such commercial vehicles off all streets during rush hours; enforce the law against double parking, and see that street cars and buses, their drivers and owners, are penalized for jumping red lights.

The Post Impressionist

Equipages

As Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont would say, "I don't know what society is coming to" (and for that matter, who does?) The streamlined elite (pronounced E light) of today have shed almost all of the old graces and gestures that made being "in society" a distinction.

It has gotten so that you can no longer tell the social status of a person by his automobile. They all look alike. The ones out front of the juke joints and those around the Mayflower Hotel on the mornings of Mrs. Townsend's musicals are indentical twins.

But such was not the case back in the twenties and pre-twenties. Those were the days of the custom-built jobs. Body by Buin, Fisher, Fleetwood, et al. And, like pipes, the older and more mellow the cars, the more social were the owners.

Who that remembers could ever forget (figure that one out) the electric puddle jumper owned and operated by Axel Wichfeld, the tutor who married into the Moores of Massachusetts Avenue family. There my friends was an equipage! Axel used to sit under the steering bar with his knees hoisted above his head and go tearing along at 9 miles an hour. Maybe you think heads didn't turn, but they did. The polo knew that anyone in that sort of a jalopy was really somebody. To add the final touch of distinction there was an oval plaque, colored and patterned after a potato bug, on either side of the body.

Elsie French Vanderbilt had a special Locomobile landau (whatever became of that word?) with a burgundy paint job. When new this was scarcely a sensation, but as the years rolled by it became a classic, and firmly established Elsie as a bona fide member of the haute monde.

Dennis Upson had a couple of pips. Both were Rolls Royce, and must have been one and two off the factory's assembly line. The limousine was the better, and resembled a modified hearse, while the convertible coupe with an aluminum hood was a dignified riot. When these two chariots bowled up the Avenue the pedestrians knew that society was on the prowl.

Who could forget the orchid Cord town car owned by the debutante granddaughter of Atlanta's social arbiter, Mrs. Peel. This wonderful spectacle was the pride of National Park Seminary campus (where its owner was being finished) and was the envy of all the elegant young ladies in the school. When the sweet young things of the seminary put on their Sunday best and wheeled gaily around town in this colorful creation they looked like something that had gotten lost from a Mardi Gras parade. When the youthful owner descended upon the town alone in her mauve buggy she wore an outfit carefully tailored in the same shade. From a distance it appeared that the carriage was gliding along unattended, so perfectly blended were car and driver.

Margaret Fahnestock had a spectacular little number—an all-white Cadillac coupe, which was as inconspicuous as her pink palace residence. Natives who recall this chaste conveyance now reflect that therein was probably the original model for the Good Humor wagons of today.

She always took an extra turn or two around the circle before heading home, in order to be sure that everyone had seen her car. There was that memorable afternoon when Margaret and Elsie Vanderbilt engaged in a circle rounding marathon, each refusing to continue on down Massachusetts Avenue until the other had preceded her. The contest had extended into the ninth revolution, and threatened to become an all-afternoon fracas, but for a timely intervention. A team of firetrucks came screaming down the avenue and swarmed onto the circle, causing both terrified contestants to scuttle into a side street.

Another motor of widespread fame was the gray roadster owned by Harry Campbell Graef. It was a variety of Knight motor, but veddy, veddy British. On the radiator grill was mounted a replica (or maybe it was the original) of the British Crown, that bespoke membership in the British Automobile Club, and front and rear hung plates bearing the letters GB, in case anyone didn't get the Anglo angle. Even today we are conscious of this latter tendency on the part of those who still fear that we do not get the Anglo angle.

Last but not least was the thing Larz Anderson cherished. The bonnet suggested that it was a Locomobile, but the body was something else again. And the bonnet never knew what the body was doing. No one with less social significance would have dared to drive it. It was entirely open, and looked like two rows of theater seats on wheels. While never definitely proven or disproven, this ark was thought by many to have been George Washington's staff car.

Picture one of these jobs rounding Dupont Circle and heading down Connecticut Avenue. There were no Dupont Circle Apartments at that time. The old red brick British Embassy used to stand at the corner of N Street and Connecticut Avenue. People sitting in the park or strolling along the streets would run to the curb when one of these cars rolled by. What a sensation it created! The clerks in the embassy would drop their pencils as the horns sounded along the avenue. They ran to the windows to stare nice conservative British stares at the not so conservative automobiles of the American rich. That was long before the day of Osgood, Thomas Henson's duck, now Commander in Chief of Dupont Circle, who can stop traffic at any time he wishes to make a safe crossing to the other side of the street, and who is totally unconcerned with the outward trappings of combustive transportation.

But getting back to today. Where can you find a truly glamorous car? One with an aura of stately splendor. Alas, the automobile has become a mere transportation item in place of a social asset. The day of patina and prestige had gone forever. ARIEL McNINCH.

France in Defeat

(June 15-19, 1940)

Near MAGDEBURG, June 15, 1940—Spending the night in a hostelry along the Autobahn. At 10 p. m. we heard the news. Verdun taken! The Verdun that cost the Germans 600,000 dead the last time they tried to take it. And this time they take it in one day. Granted that the French army is in a fix; that the fall of Paris has demoralized it still further. Still you ask: What has happened to the French?

SHIRER

MAUBEUGE, June 16—We drove all afternoon up the Valley of the Meuse. Amazingly little evidence of the war. Dinner at Charleroi. Bitter faces in the streets. No bread in the town, and water only for drinking. I bought the local journal. An order in the paper said the German troops and the Belgian gendarmerie would fire without warning into any lighted windows.

Maubeuge itself has been terribly destroyed. One of the German officers tells us what happened. German tanks tried to get through the town. French antitank guns concealed in houses got the first five or six. The Germans had to retreat. Word was sent back to the Stukas. They came over and did their job with their usual deadly efficiency. Underneath the church, the commandant tells us, was the town's biggest air-raid shelter. One of the bombs hit it square on. Result: Five hundred civilians lie buried under the debris.

One of the soldiers from South Germany later whispers to me: "Yeah, it was the Prussians who destroyed the town." He, a common German soldier, is disgusted with the destruction. "Always the poor people who get it," he says.

The local commandant, a German businessman called up from the reserve, receives us in one of the few houses in town still standing. A few facts from him: Ten thousand out of 24,000 residents of Maubeuge either have returned or rode out the bombing and bombardment. The German army, and, since a few days, German relief workers, help to keep them from starving. They bring bread from Germany. But yesterday, the old boy says, he uncovered some wheat and is getting it ground into flour.

The commandant talks on enthusiastically about his problem. Obviously he enjoys his job, and he is certainly not the old sadistic Prussian master of the story-books. On the whole, a very human fellow.

An orderly shows us our quarters, in an abandoned house which, we soon establish from the papers lying around, was occupied by one of the leading local bankers. I take to myself one of the family bedrooms. The banker's clothes hang neatly in the armoire. Even the long-tailed black coat—you can see him, fat and important, strolling through the streets to church on Sundays in it—is there. Obviously he has left in a great hurry. Downstairs we noticed the breakfast dishes on the dining-room table. A meal never finished.

What a break in his comfortable bourgeois life this must have been, this hasty flight before the town was blown up! Here in this house—until last month—solidity, a certain comfort, respectability. Then boom! The Stukas, the shells. And that life, like the houses all around, blown to bits.

PARIS, June 17.—It was no fun for me. When we drove into Paris, down the familiar street, I had an ache in the pit of my stomach and I wished I had not come. My German companions were in high spirits at the sight of the city.

First shock: the streets are utterly deserted, the stores closed, the shutters down tight over all the windows. It was the emptiness that got you. We drove down the Rue Lafayette. German army cars and motorcycles speeding, screaming down the street. But on the sidewalks not a human being.

We turned left down the Rue Pelletier to the Grand Boulevard. The boulevard too was deserted except for a few German soldiers, staring into the windows of the few shops that did not have their shutters down. The Place de l'Opera now. For the first time in my life, no traffic tie-up here. The Cafe de la Paix seemed to be just reopening. A lone garcon was bringing out some tables and chairs. German soldiers stood on the terrace grabbing them.

Then we turned at the Madeleine, its facade covered with sandbags, and raced down the Rue Royale. Now before us, the familiar view. The Place de la Concorde, the Seine, the Chambre des Deputes, over which a giant Swastika flag flies.

We got rooms in the Scribe. To my surprise and pleasure, Demaree Bess and Walter Kerr, who had stayed on in Paris after almost all of their colleagues had left, were in the lobby.

Demaree says the panic in Paris was indescribable. Everyone lost his head. The government gave no lead. People were told to scoot, and at least 3,000,000 out of the 5,000,000 in the city ran, ran without baggage, literally ran on their feet towards the south.

The inhabitants are bitter at their government, which in the last days, from all I hear, completely collapsed. It even forgot to tell the people until too late that Paris would not be defended.

I have a feeling that what we're seeing here in Paris is the complete breakdown of French society—a collapse of the army, of government, of the morale of the people. It is almost too tremendous to believe.

PARIS, June 18.—Marshal Petain has asked for an armistice! The Parisians, already dazed by all that has happened, can scarcely believe it. Nor can the rest of us. That the French army must give up is clear. But most of us expected it to surrender, as did the Dutch and Belgian armies, with the government going, as Reynaud had boasted it would, to Africa, where France, with its navy and African armies, can hold out for a long time.

The inhibitants got the news of Petain's action by loudspeaker, conveniently provided by the Germans in nearly every square in town. I stood in a throng on the Place de la Concorde when the news first came. They were almost struck dead.

Before the Hotel Crillon, cars raced up and unloaded gold-braided officers. There was much peering through monocles, heel-clicking, saluting. The people in the Place de la Concorde did not notice the bustle. They stared at the ground, then at each other. They said: "Petain surrendering! What does it mean? Comment? Pourquoi. And no one appeared to have the heart for an answer.

This evening Paris is weird and, to me, unrecognizable. There's a curfew at 9 p. m.—an hour before dark. The black-out is still enforced. The streets tonight are dark and deserted. The Paris of gay lights, the laughter, the music—when was that? And what is this?

I noticed today some open fraternizing between German troops and the inhabitants. Most of the soldiers act like naive tourists, and this has proved a pleasant surprise to the Parisians. I saw them by the thousands today, photographing Notre Dame, the Arc de Triomphe, the Invalides. Thousands of German soldiers congregate all day long at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where the flame still burns under the Arc. They bare their blond heads and stand there gazing.

PARIS, June 19.—The armistice is to be signed at Compiegne! In the same wagon-lit coach of Marshal Foch that witnessed the signing of that other armistice on November 11, 1918 in Compiegne Forest. The French don't know it yet. The Germans are keeping it secret. But through somebody's mistake I found out today.

At 4:30 p. m. the military rushed me out to Compiegne. That was the mistake. They shouldn't have. But orders got mixed up, and before they could get unentangled I was there.

When we arrived on the scene at 6 p. m., German army engineers were feverishly engaged in tearing out the wall of the museum where Foch's private car had been preserved. Before we left, the engineers had demolished the wall and hauled the car out from its shelter.

Returning to Paris, we stopped on the road that winds over the wooded hills between Compiegne and Senlis. A small French column had been bombed there on the road. Scattered along a quarter of a mile were 20 hastily dug graves. A "75" stood near the road with the other leavings, which from the look of them had been abandoned in great haste. I looked at the date of the cannon: 1918! Here the French defended the most important road to the capital with World War guns!

A Defense Gap Closes

Mexico, Britain Agree

Mexico, D. F.

DEMOCRATIC circles throughout Mexico have enthusiastically welcomed the announcement of the resumption of diplomatic relations with Great Britain after a suspension of three and a half years as paving the way for a much closer cooperation between the strongly democratic government of President Avila Camacho and the Washington-London axis. It is considered specially significant that a few minutes after the Mexican minister for foreign affairs announced the agreement with London he told newspaper correspondents that if the United States enters the war, Mexico will comply with the obligations it assumed at the Panama and Havana conferences of American foreign ministers.

Mexico is rushing its own defense program to permit effective cooperation with any continental defense undertaking to the best of its ability within its limited financial resources. The new defense budget, announced this week, totals 115 million pesos (24 million dollars), in addition to the rearmament program that is to be undertaken with loans from the United States whenever the general settlement now being negotiated is signed.

UNIVERSAL CONSCRIPTION is to be established at the beginning of the new year, in addition to which compulsory military training is to be a part of the curriculum in all rural schools which are under Federal jurisdiction. In the meantime, measures are being taken to improve all branches of the regular army of 42,000 men, which is the cornerstone of the defense structure now being built.

Thirty military aviators are to be graduated from the army flying school this season and classes are being enlarged to permit the preparation of 70 pilots in each of the next two years. The government is negotiating for the purchase of several fast patrol boats in the United States to be used for suppressing the smuggling of strategic minerals to the Axis powers on Japanese vessels calling at Pacific coast ports. Fourteen million pesos (three million dollars) is to be spent in rebuilding the 193-mile railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, from Salina Cruz on the Pacific to Puerto Rico on the Gulf of Mexico to put it into condition to handle the heavy emergency traffic that would arise in case the Panama Canal should be damaged or closed.

An antiespionage law is being pushed through Congress which will give the government the measures necessary for curbing all Fifth Column activities and the government has announced that persons engaged in these activities are already being closely watched.

Ever since the inauguration of President Avila Camacho there had been a strong public demand for a renewal of diplomatic relations with Great Britain, heartily supported by the leading newspapers. Both houses of Congress had asked the national government to take steps to bring about an agreement for the reopening of the legations. It was argued in Congress and the newspapers that as Mexico is now cooperating cordially with the United States in the inter-American movement for the defense of democracy, there should be diplomatic relationship with Great Britain, whose democracy is considered to be the issue at stake.

Relations were suspended by the Cardenas government on May 13, 1938, because the then minister of foreign affairs considered unfriendly the tone of a note that had been presented by the British Minister, Mr. Owen O'Malley, demanding the immediate payment of the third annual installment of 300,000 pesos on the debt which Mexico had recognized in favor of Great Britain for damages sustained by British subjects during the revolution. Although this incident was not directly connected with the expropriation of the British oil fields, it brought to a crisis the strained relationship that had been created by a series of notes from the British government protesting against the expropriations.

WHEN Mexico made overtures to the British government some time ago looking toward the renewal of diplomatic relations, London replied that the matter had been referred to Lord Halifax at Washington, "who," the note said, "is the highest ranking diplomat in the British service and also the one closest to Mexico" and that on his recommendation it was the policy of the Foreign Office not to renew diplomatic relations until the Mexican government has paid for the expropriated petroleum properties.

It is understood that the Mexican government suggested at that time: (1) that the two countries reopen their legations and appoint new ministers; (2) that there be no previous discussion of either past or future relations; (3) that the oil problem and all other outstanding questions be settled through the usual diplomatic channels after the new ministers had been appointed.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD here now that relations have been renewed on a gentlemen's agreement that the troublesome oil question will be left in abeyance during the present war emergency.

It is reported in certain well-informed circles here that the British government's changed attitude toward Mexico may have been an outcome of the conference between President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, but the report has not been confirmed. It is recalled, however, that at about the time the Atlantic conference took place there were persistent rumors that Mexico had asked the United States to use its good offices in favor of the renewal of diplomatic relations with Great Britain, rumors that were officially denied at that time in Washington but not by the Mexican government.

Our Assumption

By Mark Sullivan

The Job Of Deliveries

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT last week announced that our output of tanks is to be greatly increased. More money is to be asked from Congress, new factories to be built, existing factories expanded.

SULLIVAN

This is in accord with policy adopted by the Administration, overwhelmingly supported by Congress and the people. It is a step in a job to which we have committed ourselves.

Accompanying the policy and the job is an optimistic assumption, as far as it goes. The assumption is that the United States, when it gets under way, can turn out more tanks (and other war materials) than Germany. Just how much more, we do not know exactly. Call it twice as much. Call it five times as much.

BUT THERE are two things. One is tanks. The other, quite different, we may call tanks-on-the-battle front. The real problem is, can we deliver on the battle front more tanks than Germany? The location of the battle front at the present time is central Russia.

Tanks on the battle front are made up of two factors—the making of the tank, and the transporting of it. It is in this double respect that we must compare our factory capacity with Germany's factory capacity.

For Germany, the double job is relatively easy. Germany can make a tank in central Germany and load it on a railroad car. The railroad can proceed to the battle front by a comparatively straight and short trip, call it 1500 miles, without interruption. For Germany, the job is like making tanks at Pittsburgh and delivering them to a battle front along the Mississippi River. True, Germany has two impediments. One is, the gauge of Russian railroads, the distance between rails, is greater than on German roads. But Germany, with great quantities of labor, her own and that of prisoners, can readily adjust the gauge of the Russian railroads. Germany's other impediment, quite serious, is scarcity of railroad cars. But admitting these impediments, Germany's job of making a tank and getting it to the battle front is relatively simple.

CONSIDER the job in our case. We make a tank in Pittsburgh. We ship it by rail to New York. At New York we unload it and put it on a boat. The boat proceeds—through submarine-infested waters—to Archangel, some 6000 miles. At Archangel, we transship again to a railroad. The railroad from Archangel to the battle front is at nearly all points close to the German lines, easy to be interrupted by raids, from air or otherwise.

Or, the ship bearing American tanks goes from New York to the Persian Gulf, some 12,000 miles, through submarine-infested waters. At the Persian Gulf, the tank is transshipped to a railroad, which is in poor condition, for a several-hundred mile trip to the battle front.

Or, we make the tank at Pittsburgh, ship it by rail to San Francisco; transship to a boat for a 4000 mile trip to Vladivostock, transship again to a railroad, which is in primitive condition, for a 6000 mile trip to the battle front.

PERHAPS some engineer can translate all this into figures, can make a formula expressing the difference between the United States and Germany with respect to delivering tanks at the battle front. Taking into account both factors—the making of the tank and the delivery of it—one would say the advantage to Germany, the handicap of the United States, must be in a proportion of something like 5 to 1. However, engineers and military strategists know more about this than any layman can. In any event, it would be interesting and useful to hear from the experts.

What is true of tanks is true of all forms of military equipment—guns, ammunition and the like. The one exception is airplanes. Airplanes going from the United States to the battlefront presumably would make part of the trip or all of it by air. The easier delivery of airplanes suggests an inquiry. Are airplanes the best contribution we can make? In our role of arsenal, would we do better to concentrate on making airplanes?

THIS IS a detail of the whole problem of the war, and the contribution we can make. Somewhere, one supposes, some group of leaders — American and British together—has thought all these things out, and arrived at a program. One presumes we do not go along making first a drive on tanks, then a drive on airplanes, then a drive on ships. One presumes we do not make all these drives without someone having clear understanding of the relation of each to the whole.

To the layman it looks as if, at this time, in any battle of men and metal—that is, any land battle—Hitler can win. This is not to say, necessarily, that Hitler can win a war of endurance, such as the Russian situation may come to be. On the other hand, it is quite clear that on the sea the United States and Britain are dominant, so dominant that Hitler does not even pretend to challenge them. This dominance at sea seems permanently assured. In the air, Hitler is dominant over all the areas where the war is active.

But decidedly it is not certain that Hitler can maintain his air dominance over a period of years. To outstrip Hitler in the air is the most practicable objective of Britain and the United States. While the American arsenal must do many things, the one contribution always to be emphasized is war planes in the greatest possible quantity.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey Again

Dear Ma:

This is just a line to let you know I am getting nervouser and nervouser on account of I just read a bunch of newspapers about what is happening outside of camp. It looks to me like the Army might get into trubbel after all.

I didn't pay much attention to news lately but I got a chance to read a paper last night and either we are in a war right now or I am crazy. I tried to find a headline which might give a little encouragement to a idea that the war was just an affair over in Europe, Asia and Africa, but no dice. Every place mentioned in most of the headlines was some place close to home and all the naval action seemed to be right off Coney Island.

This torpedoing of the Kearney and them other United States ships shocked all the boys, especially them which was planning on getting released not to be recalled unless there was a increase in the state of emergency. If I was a jeep getting released now under that condishun I wood not plan on being out of the Army more than a couple of days or a weekend at most.

I always thought that when a American warship was sunk by a enemy it was a act of war and wood mean trubbel right away but you can't never tell these days on account of war is no longer a picnic and nobody wants to rush in unless there is no way out I gess. I see the Nazis say they do not know nothing about the torpedoing of the Kearney and that President Roosevelt did it on account of he ain't got trubbel enough. You wood think to hear them Nazis talk that they wood never start nothing with nobody and that Roosevelt had a long range torpedo witch he used by pressing a button at Hyde Park. I was serprised that Berlin did not make no hint that maybe Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt did it.

I seen by the headlines that the Nazis have got the best part of Russia. The part witch is left has no names anybody can pronounce. This does not make me sleep any better nights and I gess the bugler is nervous two on account of he can't sleep at all and blows the thing as early as 4 a. m. There is more promise of lease-lending aid than I ever seen before and I figure the chances I will get leased to somebody is growing ever minute.

It does not look to me like the leasing and lending is much help to Joe Stalin and I wood not be serprised if this war wound up with everybody fighting the United States for breach of promise.

New Shortages

By Ernest K. Lindley

Not Enough Chemicals

ALMOST EVERY DAY a new shortage appears. Shortages of metals have had the most publicity. But the insufficiency of certain chemicals is just as acute and, according to defense officials, may interfere even more seriously with production for civilian use.

LINDLEY

Styled shoes for women, for example, are cemented, not stitched. Apparently only one kind of cement will stand the strain. It is made of pyroxylin, which in turn breaks down into nitro-cotton, needed for explosives, and another chemical used in explosives, films, and several other articles important to rearmament.

Maybe a substitute can be found, but it looks now as if the ladies would have to do without the daintier types of footwear. If so, the manufacturers and their workers will be up a tree, because, owing to other defense needs, they will not be able to get stitching machinery.

ASCENDING the scale, the women's hosiery outlook is even rougher than when shipments of Japanese silk stopped. Nylon was expected to meet part of the demand for silk stockings. At Charleston, W. Va., a big new nylon plant stands about 85 per cent complete. Machinery for the plant was given a high priority rating months ago, with an eye to the eventual stoppage of silk imports. This seemed, at the time, like a far-sighted decision. So materials went into the plant which might have been used for defense proper. But defense needs have become more pressing and defense officials more hardboiled. Government sources report that it is unlikely that the remaining 15 per cent of the equipment will be forthcoming in the near future.

If the plant were completed it would run into another shortage—of phenol, better known to the householder as carbolic acid. Phenol is essential to the production of nylon—but also to an immense range of defense articles.

The shortage of phenol is so grave, in fact, that some defense experts think it is doubtful whether existing nylon plants can be kept going. Large shipments of phenol were requested by the Russians, and have been promised to them. DuPont is preparing to build another phenol plant. But, according to Government experts, it takes months, perhaps a year, to get a new plant of this type into production. To make matters worse, one of the two ways of making phenol calls for large quantities of chlorine. And chlorine is another chemical in which the shortage is serious.

THE SUPPLY of fine yarn for cotton hose is limited. Rayon of the kind used for hosiery is somewhat easier. But Government experts who know something of the chemical situation are freely predicting that bare legs will be high style for women before many more months have passed.

The shortage of phenol is hitting a long line of articles using plastics, from washing machines to radios—and not excepting automobiles. Because metals were short—and also insulating materials such as cork—manufacturers have been turning to plastic substitutes. But now they are finding that there aren't enough plastics to go around.

Ironically, it was the aluminum shortage which first compelled some manufacturers to use plastics. There is a shortage of virgin aluminum for airplanes. But there are large supplies of secondary aluminum, which cannot be used to any great extent in defense production. Huge piles of pots and pans contributed in the recent drives are still standing around. These could be melted down to make parts for washing machines, refrigerators and other items.

DYES ARE under pressure, largely because the shutting off of German sources has brought most of the textile industry of the non-Axis world to our doorstep. There will be no over-all lack, according to Government experts, but some colors or shades may become hard to get.

Dry cleaners already have been put on a 50 per cent ration of high-grade cleaning fluids.

The chlorine shortage is snapping back on the machine side of defense production. Fine tools and engines are kept well greased or oiled while being machined. The quickest and cleanest method of de-greasing them in preparation for use is by passing them through a vapor bath for which chlorine is needed.

In chemicals, as in metals, one shortage may cause a long line of dislocations and stringencies. Many high officials now regret profoundly that a bigger-scale expansion of production of basic materials was not begun earlier. Here and there warnings of shortages are proving exaggerated. But by and large, serving as the main arsenal of the anti-Axis world will strain our productive resources beyond all expectations of a year ago. The civilian is sentenced to do without—and like it.

World Labor Conference Opens Today in New York

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—The first world labor conference since the 1939 invasion of Poland, its makeup reflecting the fortunes of war, opens tomorrow with delegates from 38 nations sitting down to discuss munitions production and post-war problems.

The sponsoring group, the International Labor Organization, is the sole functioning offshoot of the League of Nations. Since the war engulfed Europe the I. L. O. has been operating from McGill University in Montreal.

Representing the Vichy government will be Francois de Panafieu, counselor of the French Embassy in Washington, who will sit as sole envoy from the "collaborationist" powers.

Around the same conference table will be at least one observer from the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gualle and full delegations from the governments in exile of Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Norway.

Germany, Italy, Spain, Japan and Russia will not be represented. Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, will lead the United States group, and Maj. Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and member of the war cabinet, the British unit.

The I. L. O.'s research staff has prepared two reports as a basis for discussions, one holding that the survival of democracy depends on the successful development of cooperation among organized labor, industry and Government and the other attempting to sketch the main outlines of a program for post-war social and economic reconstruction.

Elimination of strikes is described as "one of the earliest problems faced by all the democratic nations seeking full production to meet war or defense needs."

Confidence that the people of Continental Europe eventually will be freed from Nazi rule is expressed in the section of the report dealing with lands under German domination.

"Though their free associations may be broken today, though their leaders may be killed, in exile or in hiding, the forces that once formed the spearhead of democracy in Continental Europe cannot be suppressed," the report declared.

Established under the Treaty of Versailles as an instrument for effecting universal peace through social justice, the I. L. O. held its last "annual" conference in Geneva in 1939. John G. Winant, now United States Ambassador to England, was the I. L. O. director then.

The sessions, to be held at Columbia University, will continue for ten days, with 100 delegates and 70 advisers attending. Each member nation is permitted to send four delegates—two representing government, one worker groups and one employer groups. The United States unit, besides Secretary Perkins and Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, for the Government, includes Henry I. Harriman, of the New England Power Association, for employers, and Robert J. Watt, of the A. F. of L., for labor.

Other nations participating are Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, Canada, Chile, China, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, India, Iran, Ireland, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Thailand, Union of South Africa, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia and Colombia.

Dinner Will Honor D. C. Labor Editor

A testimonial dinner in honor of Fred S. Walker, news editor and business manager of the Trades Unionist, District labor publication, will be held November 27 in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. A committee headed by Louis Lopez, president of Pressmen's Union No. 1, is making all arrangements.

G. W. U. Appointed Teaching Center

George Washington University School of Education has been designated an official teacher examining center by the American Council on Education, Dean James H. Fox announced yesterday. Prof. Ruth E. Coyner has been named national committee examiner in charge of giving examinations in this area.

These centers are being established throughout the country to assist communities that do not have their own competitive examination system in securing qualified teachers. The first examination to be given in Washington will be held January 1 and 2. Applications must be in Prof. Coyner's hands by November 29.

Reserve Board Equalizes Credit Buying Rules

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday revised its installment credit regulations, effective December 1, in order, it said, to close some loopholes and ease some restrictions.

The major changes:

1. Increase the maximum amount of installment loans covered by the regulations from $1000 to $1500.

2. Direct that installment lenders require borrowers (beginning January 2) to sign a statement as to the purpose of the loan.

3. Exempt from regulation business loans and loans for the purchase or construction of an entire building.

4. Allow farmers greater leeway in payment of installment loans.

5. Eliminate any requirement for a down payment if it would be no more than $2.

6. Permit an optional arrangement in the case of "add ons"—that is, additional credit added to any original credit—under which the new credit may be treated separately or the combined credit may be paid up in 15 months.

The requirement of a statement as to the purpose of an installment loan, the board said, "closes the loophole whereby, although dealers in listed articles were required to obtain down payments, cash lenders were free to lend the full price unless the article was given as security for the loan."

The change with respect to borrowing by farmers was intended to accord with the "seasonal nature of their income," the board said. It will permit any schedule of installment loan payments by farmers so long as the down payment and 18-month maturity requirements are met, and provided that one-half of the balance is paid within one-half of the maximum maturity.

The board announced that it had eliminated its proposed $5 minimum monthly installment requirement, which was to have become effective January 1. At the same time it prohibited the extension of an installment loan for the purpose of making a down payment on one of the 24 articles listed in the regulations.

The original installment credit regulations were announced in August and became effective in September. In general, they limited such credit to 18 months and fixed a schedule of down payments for certain articles, ranging from 33 1-3 per cent on automobiles to 10 per cent on furniture.

Beer and Skittles Club Plans Halloween Dance

By Carolyn Bell

A Britisher of our acquaintance—having duly attended a pie-eating contest and tobacco festival in search of "Americana"—is now hunting for a real Halloween party. Possibly he would be interested in looking in at the "Beer and Skittles Club" meeting on Friday night at the Sulgrave.

The club, started several seasons ago by Joan Dodd and Harland Crowell, has been meeting each Sunday evening for an outdoor picnic. However, they announce: "A Halloween costume dance at La Sala de Mejico, of the Sulgrave Club—pumpkin throwing, gobbling and spooking will commence at 10 o'clock." They continue, "We wish to impress you all with the fact that this will be a costume dance and expect you to dress accordingly. There will be prizes for the most attractive as well as the cleverest attire." Robert Woods is president of the club and other officers include John H. Arrington, vice president; Harland Crowell, vice president; Peggy Lansdowne, secretary; Alfred S. Baer, treasurer. Directors include Julie Cahill, Joan Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton 2d, and Mr. and Mrs. ames M. E. O'Crady.

Girls Learn Cinderella Arts in Beauty Class

Study and Home Work Necessary For Good Figure, Correct Make-up

By Carolyn Abbott.

EVERY WOMAN looks forward to the day—come riches—when she can walk into a beauty salon and say "Here I am, start from scratch and make me over." In the meantime, she remains overweight, awkward and just so-so in appearance.

Among the dreamers are many business girls. But some are doers. These don't wait for a million dollars, but budget their meager salaries and try to translate their visions into realities.

In the Washington branch of a New York beauty salon, a group of business girls meets several times a week to learn corrective make-up, and good posture and to trimp off excess inches. To obtain permanent results, they are taught how to care for their skins at home, how to arrange their hair becomingly, how to harmonize make-up with skin tones and costume colors.

The most glaring defects in the business girl's appearance are "fatigue posture," thick waistlines, excessively large hips. Also according to the manager of this salon, rouge stands out on her cheeks like 50 cent pieces.

Fatigue Posture

Fatigue posture, the manager pointed out, shows head thrust forward and down, round, slumped shoulders, protruding stomach or shelf—like derrier, big hips and thick waistline. Diaphragm also juts out in front.

To remedy these faults, the salon stresses corrective posture by the "tuck in" position. This means hips tucked under, stomach pulled in and up, spine straight, shoulders down back and relaxed. Following are the class instructions for acquiring this position: Lie flat on floor. Keep pulling the small of back down, down until it touches the floor. Be sure that shoulders, hips and back touch floor. Continue to press the back downward until the stomach is flat and the entire body in perfect alignment.

Further Checks Made

Once the class has perfected this reclining position, the instructor further checks the posture by having the members stand with backs to wall. Again shoulders, small of back and hips are pressed against the wall. When the body is in perfect alignment standing up, correct walking is practiced.

Retaining the "tuck in" position—essential to good posture—stooped, rounded shoulders are straightened by these two corrective exercises. First, sit on floor, extend arms outward to the side. Clench the fists. Make a small circle with arms, pulling shoulder blades back and down. Then clasp hands behind back, pull shoulder blades together and down.

Except for the above shoulder exercises, all others are done in progression . . . that is, first lying on floor until muscles are strengthened, then sitting and standing. "Usually the muscles are too weak in the beginning" said the manager of this salon, "to hold the correct posture position while standing up. Therefore, it is easier, and more effective to perform them in a reclining position." All exercises are done to music.

Walk on Hips

If you want to reduce the buttocks, hips and thighs, try walking on your hips, backward and forward. Do it to the record of the popular tune "Daddy," suggests the salon's exercise director.

"Most business girls neglect their hands," said the manager of the beauty salon. "They are apt to get weekly manicures and neglect their hands between times. Carbon paper, ink and stencil sheets keep the nails dark and brittle. Five minutes daily care is better than one hour each week. To keep the nails in good condition, apply a little oil over the nail and around the cuticle each day."

An initial hair cut (well shaped) and a good permanent wave is the foundation of a lovely coiffure. If you don't have a good foundation upon which to start, results will never be satisfactory. It is more economical for the business girl to get a good permanent and learn to care for it herself, than to have a cheap permanent and pay for a styling each week.

Few business girls, the manager pointed out, know how to apply or remove make-up correctly. Rouge is the worst offender. They not only put on too much but apply it without thought of shape of face. In order to apply rouge correctly, she said, "first know shape of face, apply sparingly and deftly. Turn head to side to make sure that there are no harsh lines from profile angle. Facing the mirror directly, you get only the front view. That often accounts for rouge standing out on their cheeks like red 50 cent pieces. Turn face from side to side and watch reflection in mirror to get a finished, smooth line of rouge."

Mexican Decorations

From Mexican street markets and other points south come many beautiful accessories that will add foreign flavor to American homes during these years when European and Far Eastern wares are all but impossible to obtain. There are woven mats from Oaxaco, glass from Guadalajura, tinware from Taxco, tiles from Mexico City, Hopi bowls, Guatemalan fabrics. They're charming with any provincial furniture and with early American.

Determined to make the most of her appearance, Miss Genevieve Hastings, Government employe, enrolls in a beauty class, designed for career girls. Here she is experimenting with a new hair-do, and also getting instructions on how to brush her hair properly

How to Save Time

(An Interview)

Q. I understand, Mrs. Flittwit, that you are a successful wife, mother, poet, novelist, etcher, fashion leader, charity sponsor, defense organizer, lecturer, reformer, propagandist, globetrotter, ironmonger and goldfish breeder?

A. Yes, and don't forget my hobbies. In my spare time I do spirit photography, molding in jello and collect and mount hairpins.

Q. In other words, you admit to being a Well Rounded Personality?

A. Absolutely. And I think every wife and mother should be. There is no excuse for any woman's wasting time——

Q. Just a minute, Mrs. Flittwit. Tell me what every woman would like to know—how do you get time to do all these things?

A. That is all very simple—I just plan ahead.

Q. When do you find time to plan?

A. That's very simple, too. I do it each morning while I am breakfasting in bed.

Q. Oh-h—well, who prepares your breakfast?

A. My cook. Then one of the maids brings it to me while another gets my clothes ready for the day. You see, it's all a matter of management——

Q. But doesn't it take time to supervise your maids?

A. Oh, my housekeeper does that. You see, I believe strongly that most women waste too much time in household details.

Q. Well, what about clothes, Mrs. Flittwitt? Don't you have to take time to shop?

A. Very little. Shopping is one of the chief ways women waste time.

Q. But you have the reputation of being a best-dressed woman, Mrs. Flittwit.

A. Oh, that is very simple, too. I just call up my favorite shop, announce I am coming by, and then all of the gowns I may be interested in are ready for my inspection. In that way I can do a season's shopping in an hour.

Q. Well, what about your children, Mrs. Flittwit? Don't they take some of your time?

A. Oh, yes, I am a very conscientious mother. I often have my children around my feet when I am writing a novel or doing an etching. You may have seem some of the photographs——

Q. But don't the children disturb you?

A. Whenever they get too noisy the nurse or governess takes them away.

Q. Well, how do you manage with such a busy life to entertain so beautifully, Mrs. Flittwit?

A. Just by simple planning. While I am breakfasting in bed I talk over my party menus with my housekeeper, and my guest lists, flower arrangements, etc., with my social secretary.

Q. But, Mrs. Flittwit, what of the woman who doesn't have a social secretary?

A. Every woman should have a social secretary. There is no greater timesaver.

Q. How do you manage to carry on all your reform and propaganda activities?

A. That is very simple, too. Just after I have breakfast I do all my dictating—to one of my office secretaries. It's really amazing how much time you can save by dictating!

Q. Well, Mrs. Flittwit, what do you do about all the little things that waste women's time—washing stockings, mending gloves, answering the telephone, buying toothpaste, talking to neighbors, paying bills——

A. That's all very simple. I let someone else do them.

Q. But may I inquire who pays for the doing of these things?

A. Who pays? . . . Well, I suppose my husband does.

Q. What does your husband think of all your achievements, Mrs. Flittwit?

A. Well—I—I suppose—well, to tell the truth I really haven't seen him ately.

Mary Haworth's Mail

How to Keep 3-Year-Old Boy Quiet Before Breakfast and After Supper, So That His Hard-Working Young Parents May Rest?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a grandmother from the country who wants to give some good advice to my young daughter,—an office worker and mother,—back in New York State. Her little son, aged 2½, climbs out of his crib at 6 a. m. and proceeds to pounce upon his parents, both of whom have a hard day's work ahead. He wants to play and have a good time with them. And he refuses to go to bed until 9 o'clock at night.

Last summer I visited them for two weeks and during that time he frequently did not go to sleep until 9 or 9:30 p. m. However, he was put in his crib at 7 p. m. and left alone behind a closed door. (They live in a small apartment, of two rooms, kitchen and bath.) Instead of going to sleep, he would play in his crib and call out to us. But at least, his parents had their evening meal in peace.

Now, my daughter reports that he climbs out of his crib. No doubt he will have to be tied in, to prevent him from upsetting everything in the room. My son-in-law is such a gentle young man that he has no control over the baby. And my daughter thinks if they had some good books on child rearing to read, they might be able to agree on a corrective plan of action. They employ a young girl to tend the baby in their absence, and she tries to carry out their instructions. But because none of them know how to cope with the situation, young Bobby is "ruling the roost."

Can you suggest some especially good books on child training? I got a list from the library, but would appreciate your opinions so much.

GRANDMOTHER.

This Child's Behavior Adds Up to 'Average'

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Bobby's behavior comes under the heading of "average." This is not to say that all children are so irrepressibly active at both ends of the day—but, rather, that some children are by nature assertively enterprising or daringly adventurous, whereas others are passively adaptive to rules of conduct imposed by adults. One wonders, therefore, whether your daughter is confronting a problem of how to discipline a deplorably mischievous child; or whether, rather, she is facing the problem of how to accommodate herself with good grace to the parental role—which, at best, continually taxes the patience and energies of a conscientious mother.

However, assuming that Bobby's behavior does amount to unruly insistence on being "noticed" by his parents,—it seems a pardonable attitude, all things considered in the special circumstances; and even reflects credit on the child's vigorous resourcefulness and mental alertness. For one thing, one may infer that he feels starved for parental companionship,—since both parents are away from home all day,—and is reaching avidly for what he wants and needs, in clamoring for their attention, morning and night.

For another thing, his early waking is a typical child trait—since most healthy children, who are held to an early retiring hour, have either slept themselves out by that time; or have become conditioned, by the modern infant-feeding regime, to awaken at 6 a. m. with hunger pangs. And since Bobby (it seems clear) sleeps in his parents' bedroom, it is almost inevitable that he would cheerfully abandon his crib, at the crack of dawn, to "pounce" upon them, as a means of proclaiming his readiness to start the day. The child who would remain silent and inactive after awakening in such set-up would be precociously introspective indeed.

One must remember, too, that his parents' homecoming at night is undoubtedly the high point of his day, and that it overtakes him at a time when he is most fatigued,—thus having an immeasurably exciting effect upon his nervous system. And one may surmise that his mother (more or less unawarely) "rushes" him through his nursery supper and dumps him into bed,—with the sole idea of getting him out from underfoot before she sits down to her own evening meal. Hurried handling would exert the exact reverse of a soothing or relaxing influence on his feelings and behavior. It would inevitably lessen his chances of falling immediately and soundly to sleep.

In the circumstances, it seems to me a matter for congratulation, not lament, that he is usually asleep by 9 or 9:30 p. m. at the latest. However, if his mother would keep him from leaving his crib, she might try bedding him down in a sleeping bag—of the pattern known as a "snuggle-bunny." I cannot imagine how one would go about "tying" him in—and even the sleeping bag may be inadvisable, if he is a vigorously assertive child. He might choke himself into insensibility or worse, trying to fight free of the garment. But if he is reasonably accommodating and carefully watched, the sleeping bag might mold him to a habit of lying quietly abed after lights are out in his room.

As for mornings—his parents might get an hour's extra nap by allowing him to have a special toy or book, or both, to play with quietly after he wakens. One parent or the other could rise briefly at 6 a. m. to release him from the sleeping bag, slip on his bathrobe and present him with his "reward-for-good-behavior" books and games. There is a chance that silence might reign in the bedroom for an additional hour—by virtue of such an arrangement. But it is an optimistic expectation, I submit.

As for "especially good books on child training"—the director of the National Child Research Center (whose suggestions I have solicited) recommends "Home Guidance for Young Children," by Dr. Grace Langdon, and also, "Child Care and Training," by John Anderson and Marion Faegre.

Keeping Fit Is Patriotic Duty Of Women, Says Alice Marble

By Ida Jean Kain

COULD YOU deliver the milk or the mail or drive a truck or manage a tractor? We women may never be called upon to take over such tough jobs, but there is no guarantee we won't. At any rate, this is no time to be the helpless type.

Since many of us are far from perfect specimens, it is something of a relief to learn from Alice Marble that the hardening-up process is not going to be hard to take. As a matter of cool fact, this established tennis champion and newly appointed director of physical training for women in civilian defense makes the whole program sound like a lot of fun.

It is Miss Marble's firmly founded belief that the harder you play, the harder you can work. And, also, that both should be enjoyed. She intends to make it her business to see that women have the chance to play hard more often.

Many Sports

There's badminton, tennis, softball, bowling, ice and roller skating, swimming, horseback riding, bicycling and hiking, just to name a few of the sports certain to be made more easily available under this new national program. Every single one of them is good for you and fun.

Such a plan involves some smart psychology. The experts in various fields will be asked to give their services and to coach the new sports enthusiasts so thoroughly that there will be a chance for them to show off. This means there won't be any duds. And it's the prospect of failure that makes a high percentage of women reluctant about engaging in competitive sports.

If for any reason you cannot participate in sports, your only alternative is calisthenics. Of course, they are not as much fun. But you can get such marvelous results from them in such a short time that you might well consider an exercise routine for day-in, day-out.

Beautiful and Fit

Incidentally, Miss Marble believes the trend toward smaller waistlines is to be encouraged, and that the woman who is really fit has a fine figure. The streamlined chassis and erect posture that goes with it are calculated to make a woman beautiful as well as fit. There shouldn't be any objections on that score.

For consistent figure and posture improvement, Miss Marble says you can't beat walking. We don't walk enough by far. That is one of the reasons lovely legs are such a scarcity. As you may recall, this sports star has been cited along with Claudette Colbert and Vera Zorina as having the prettiest legs in the United States. She credits walking.

For an intelligent approach to your physical fitness program, heed Miss Marble's admonition to visit your doctor first. Have a complete check-over. Only your doctor can tell you how rapidly you can proceed with your reconditioning.

The Wilmington man had flown here to visit at the country home of Dr. Earl K. Paxton, but failed to recognize the farm and landed in a field about two miles away, damaging his plane when a wing struck a post.

Reception Given For Missionaries

They were the Rev. Robert McKee, of Malone, New York; the Rev. Jerome Lawyer, Portsmouth, Ohio; Brother Theodore, Hazelton, Pa., and Brother Rex, Evansville, Ind.

Among the guests at the reception were the Very Rev. Francis P. Goodall, provincial procurator and former vicar general of the Diocese of Dacca, Bengal, India, and the Very Rev. Michael J. Early, superior of the Bengalese Seminary here. The missionaries' post will be at Dacca.

Lutheran Groups Mark 426th Anniversary Of 16th Century Reformation Movement

"A Mighty Fortress is Our God"—stirring theme song of the Reformation—rang through local and nearby Lutheran churches yesterday, as the 426th anniversary of the Reformation movement was celebrated. The formal anniversary date is October 31.

Among the highspots of the celebration was the launching of a week-long preaching mission at historic Luther Place Memorial Church, Fourteenth and N Streets Northwest, and in front of which stands a statue of Martin Luther, the father of the Reformation.

Dr. Paul H. Roth, guest speaker at Luther Place Church, extolled Luther as "having made the Word of God a vital, living thing," and said the Reformation really began in Luther's little room where the Holy Spirit made a man over.

"The power of God that had Martin Luther," said Dr. Roth, "is the power against which armies, navies and armaments are useless."

Dr. Roth, president of Northwestern Seminary at Minneapolis, Minn., will preach at Luther Place Church daily at 8 p. m., today through Friday, and also conduct a Bible study class at 6:40 p. m. daily. He was introduced by Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor. The youth choir sang.

In one of many Reformation-keynoted sermons, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder said, "Democracy can be defended ultimately only upon a religious foundation, for there is where it was born."

"The closeness of Martin Luther's birthday to the discovery of America is symbolic of the relation between the man who opened the door for liberty in the modern world and the country where his ideas of liberty perhaps have taken root most deeply," he said at Reformation Lutheran Church, where he is pastor. He is also Washington Federation of Churches' president.

Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, Grace Lutheran Church; the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, Georgetown Lutheran; Dr. J. Harold Mumper, Keller Memorial; Dr. Howard E. Snyder, Atonement Lutheran; and Dr. Henry W. Snyder, St. Paul's Lutheran.

Last year, 55 parents completed the course and were awarded a certificate from Maryland University.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Baird Snyder 3d has the inside track for administrator of the Wage and Hour Division. He is deputy administrator to Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming, who is expected to be detailed by the President to the job of administrator of Federal Works Agency. It's reliably reported that Brig. Gen. Fleming has recommended Snyder for promotion along with the elevation to deputy administator of James F. King, who is now assistant to the administrator. There are plenty of candidates to succeed Fleming but Wage and Hour was in such a terrible mess when Fleming was ordered to take over it's doubtful whether the President will put the agency in untried hands.

James Rowe, one of the President's anonymous assistants, appears to be the heavy favorite for appointment to Assistant to the Attorney General, the No. 2 job in the Justice Department. He's qualified for the position as he has handled many patronage matters for the President during his years at the White House. Federal judgeships and other Justice appointments pass through the assistant's office. The position has been vacant since the appointment of Matthew F. McGuire to a judgeship of the United States District Court. The solicitor generalship most likely will fall to Charles Fahy, the able acting solicitor.

Postmaster General Frank Walker now knows how it is to deliver parcel post packages. He got his experience first hand by accident last week in Fort Worth. The Cabinet officer was talking with several men in a hotel lobby when a Negro boy came in with a parcel post package which had been missent. The boy was trying to find its owner. Walker took the package and delivered it.

Tom Corcoran won't be appointed solicitor general, the job he dearly wants, but he'll be given an important defense appointment. The job should come through soon. It won't require Senate confirmation . . . David D. Lloyd plans to transfer from FCC's legal section to the solicitor's office at Labor . . . Postoffice employes have voluntarily worked out a plan to buy defense bonds. Employe organizations took the plan to Postmaster General Walker for his O. K., which was given. Usually plans are worked up in the front offices and pressure is gently put on employes to participate.

President Roosevelt having announced a program to double the tank program, rumor has it that Director General William Knudsen will be placed in charge of the expanded program, and that William Batt, chief of the materials division who recently went to Moscow to determine the Soviet's need, will be moved up to take over part of Knudsen's present duties.

The Dies list of 1124 Federal employes who are said to be members of subversive organizations has started mass investigations. And it's safe to assume that a number of these employes will be eased out of their jobs before the list is made public. In fact, several agencies are known to be checking over their employes with a view to dropping employes who have subversive connections. The Dies list isn't available even to department heads, but in many instances the heads have good ideas of what employes are on it.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, which was given $100,000 to investigate subversive connections of Federal workers, is now carrying on its inquiries without knowledge of department heads. Formerly the FBI informed the department head whenever a complaint was made against an employe. The department usually instructed the FBI to investigate. Now, clothed with Congressional authority, the FBI isn't standing on ceremony. Nevertheless, the actual dropping of an employe remains the responsibility of the department head. The FBI report goes to the agency without comment.

Meantime, the Civil Service Commission is being blasted for its delay in reporting on the charges of subversive connections made against several OPA employes by Dies. Leon Henderson, OPA chief, asked the commission to investigate his charges nearly two months ago. However, the commission isn't to blame for the delay. It's the Treasury whose investigating staffs are assigned to inquire into the backgrounds of all defense employes. The commission turned the cases over to the Treasury.

Earned Income Item

Dartmouth College alumni here learned yesterday the Federal Government is more frugal with its funds than it is usually given credit for. Ernest Martin Hopkins, college president, was enlisted as an OPM dollar-a-year man last January and resigned on July 1. The college bulletin reported he recently received his salary check from the Treasury—for exactly 49 cents.

20 Weekend Robberies Net $1000

Technique in 5 Holdups Lead To Belief Crimes Were by Same Men

Thieves struck hard in Washington over the weekend as more than 20 robberies, including housebreakings and window smashings were reported to police.

In five separate cases reported by victims the same technique was employed by two or three Negro robbers, leading police to believe the crimes were committed by the same persons. All of these jobs, in which victims were grabbed and held, were committed between 8 p. m. Saturday night and 1 a. m. Sunday.

Detectives from the robbery, vice and general assignment squads scoured the city looking for the robbers.

In other crimes, thieves gained entrance into homes, parked automobiles, apartments and stores, taking more than $1000 in cash and property.

The first of the crimes occurred shortly after 8 p. m. Saturday night when Ashley W. McAutcheon, Negro, of 1714 Cochran Street Northwest, a delivery boy for Feldmans Market, 320 Florida Avenue Northwest, was held up by two men at the point of a revolver and robbed of $90. The theft occurred in the 600 block of Girard Street Northwest.

Two hours later, Joseph A. Jackson, of 1416 Q Street Northwest, reported he was walking on the street at Sixth and M Streets Northwest when he was grabbed from behind by a man, struck on the head with a blunt instrument by a second man and robbed of $14.

At 11:30 p. m., Louis Kopos, 623 Third Street Northwest, was walking in the 200 block of G Street Northwest when three Negroes strongarmed him taking about $40 from his billfold.

Shortly after midnight, Robert G. Greenfield, Negro, of 1946 New Hampshire Avenue, reported he was attacked from behind by three men who held and robbed him of $16.50. About 1:15 a. m., George A. Blendinger, of 121 Thirteenth Street Northeast was strongarmed by three men as he was standing in the 700 block of Seventh Street Northeast and robbed of $20.

Thieves early yesterday smashed the show window of a store at 309 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, owned by David McKinnen, and stole watches and cigarette cases and lighters valued at $27.

Nellie Kuminsky, proprietor of a grocery store at 315 Q Street Northwest, surprised a Negro bandit rifling a bureau drawer in the living quarters at that address. She said the man forced her into a closet and fled with $200 she had saved.

The Kit-Mar Restaurant, 2300 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was entered by forcing a steel mesh grill on the rear window and the contents of vending machines and a quantity of cigarettes stolen having a total value of $52. The thieves left behind their tools, consisting of a pair of pliers, small wrench, two screw drivers and a pair of gloves.

Other housebreakings occurred at the restaurant of Henry Wong, 4469 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; home of Samuel B. Moore, 5324 Bass Place Southeast; home of Grace Coffman, 702 G Street Northeast, where $150 was stolen; John Meiklejohn, Inc. Coal Yard office, 212 Van Buren Street Northwest, where robbers attempted unsuccessfully to crack a safe; apartment of Mike Becker, 1338 Seventh Street Northwest, where $70 was taken.

Feature of the program will be the world premiere of "Acceleration," a work written especially for the National Symphony by the distinguished American composer, Roy Harris.

More Religion In Educational System Asked

The Rev. Frederick J. Bishop, pastor of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, yesterday sounded the call for more religion in the educational system.

Advising that "we must educate the whole of man, not just teach the three R's," the clergyman said there are "plenty of brains" in the schools, but that they have lost moral character and the practice of religion.

Expressing the belief that "armies and armaments cannot save us," Mr. Bishop said "character and character alone can do it," and that "our unordained ministers (our teachers) along with the ordained ministers must help build a better world."

Harvest Festival Set

Postlude

Rubinstein Recital Opens Dorsey Series

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Arthur Rubinstein in a piano recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: Prelude, Intermezzo and Fugue in C major (Bach-Busoni), Sonata in F minor, Op. 57 (Beethoven), Prelude in A minor from "Pour le Piano," Prelude No. 20, "Ondine" (Debussy), Suite from "Petrushka" (Stravinski), Scherzo in C sharp minor, Berceuse, Two Etudes, Polonaise in A flat, Op. 53 (Chopin).

Starting Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's seasonal array of musicians, Arthur Rubinstein was cordially received yesterday afternoon in thronged Constitution Hall, and demonstrated afresh his prowess as an egregious pianist, in the original laudatory sense of the adjective. He has everything for which the piano novice longs: prodigious technique, accuracy, fleetness and confidence. In his admirable equipment, the student can observe all the excellencies of virtuosity without necessarily endorsing the use he makes of them. Great master of the keyboard, he astonishes with his facile power, but he does not compel one to agree with his readings by the eloquence of a great artist.

BROWN

His glittering program abounded in opportunties to witness skill at work on the performance of familiar compositions, but disappointed those who expect something more than routine from a musician capable of fearless exploration. He could have selected, for example, a work more characteristic of Ferruccio Busoni's personality than the transcription of Bach's Prelude, Adagio and Fugue in C major, which imposes upon the piano the hopeless task of emulating the sonority of the organ. His execution of this showpiece would not, one surmises, have been thoroughly approved by the transcriber, particularly in the matter of pedaling and in the tonal coloring.

His interpretative insight was at its best in the reading of the F minor sonata called "Appassionata," not by Beethoven but by August Cranz, the publisher—one of those reckless mortals who take upon themselves the responsibility of tampering with genius. The title is singularly inept for a work surcharged with the tragic sense of life. The two selections from Debussy's impressionism, the A minor prelude from "Pour le Piano" and the "Ondine," were played with fluency but more forcefulness than their delicacy requires.

Nothing short of a tour de force was his vigorous handling of the suite arranged by Stravinski and "Petrushka." Yet this again was a case of the piano contending with insuperable difficulties. The essence of "Petrushka" as music is the amazing cleverness of orchestral color applied to rhythmic patterns, and these tints seem no more than black and white in the transcription. What is continually interesting and unexpected in the ballet becomes somewhat monotonous in the piano version.

Dr. J. R. Edwards Scores 'Spiritual Isolationism'

Dr. John R. Edwards, superintendent of the West Washington Methodist District, last night condemned "spiritual isolationism" in an address at Leland Junior High School in Bethesda.

He spoke at a rally of six Bethesda Protestant churches, climaxing a 3-week community religious survey that reached 3268 homes of all denominations.

"The church, as a vehicle of truth and right, is necessarily related to the world's well-being," said Dr. Edwards, insisting that "no person or nation lives unto itself."

Other pastors and churches represented at the meeting were the Rev. Hartwell F. Chandler, Bethesda Methodist Church; the Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, First Baptist Church; the Rev. James S. Albertson, Bethesda Presbyterian; the Rev. J. E. Williams, St. John's Episcopal, and the Rev. W. G. Oram, Bethesda Christian Church.

Gospel Mission Chapel Dedicated

Dedication of its new chapel at Fifth and H Streets Northwest yesterday was a feature of the thirty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Gospel Mission here.

The Rev. Bronwen Davies Clifford, noted evangelist, who has been conducting meetings at Metropolitan Baptist Church, addressed the congregation at the dedicatory rites in the afternoon, and greetings were brought by Superintendent Harvey V. Prentice and Lewis H. Fisher, president of the mission's board of trustees. Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, offered the dedicatory prayer. Mr. Prentice also gave his report.

Dr. Brooks Issues Call for Unity

Warning that America faces the "most crucial period" in its history, Dr. R. W. Brooks yesterday sounded a call for national unity in an address over Station WINX.

Dr. Brooks, who is pastor of Lincoln Congregational Temple, at Eleventh and R Streets Northwest, said that "the thinking Negro insists that today is not the time to raise domestic issues, but to reassert our national strength."

"It is not the time to emphasize our differences, but the time to join hands," he declared. "It is not the time to stress Protestantism, Catholicism or Judaism, but rather the time to make practical the basic values of every faith."

4 State Groups Open Season During Week

The social season for Washington's transplanted citizenry gains momentum this week as four State societies renew activity with meetings and dances, three of them with an accent on Halloween.

The Wisconsin State Society will elect officers and hear addresses by Wisconsin's Senator Alexander Wiley and Representatives Harry Sauthoff and Thad F. Wasielewski tomorrow night at the Eastern Star Temple, 2600 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Dinner at 7 p. m. will be followed by informal dancing.

Halloween parties will be staged by the Nebraska State Society and the Society of Virginia Friday night and by the Georgia State Society Saturday night.

Nebraskans gathering at the Shoreham Hotel at 9 p. m. will witness two floor shows and dance to the music of Tiny Meeker's Band.

The affair, at which costumes will be optional, is in honor of newcomers to Washington.

The Virginia Society's entertainment and dance is slated for 9:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel, where a special Halloween show will be staged along with other entertainment acts. Members are invited, but not required, to wear costume. Results of officers' elections, now under way by ballot, will be announced at the event.

The Georgians' Halloween ball will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, with 9:30 p. m. as the starting hour. Representative Hugh Peterson, president, announced all Georgians in Washington and vicinity would be welcome. Costumes are optional.

The Louisiana State Society's initial event of the season is scheduled for November 4, when a dance will be held at the Washington Hotel.

Loot Recovered Before Theft Is Reported

Nearly 24 hours after Prince Georges County, Md., police had recovered most of the loot, Mrs. Leland O. Lovett, wife of Commander Lovett, U. S. N., yesterday reported theft of packed suitcases from her parked automobile in Washington.

The car was parked in front of 2020 F Street Northwest and had been packed with clothing, jewelry and traveling effects for a trip to San Diego, Calif. Commander Lovett is on duty with the Pacific fleet.

Five suitcases were found on Walker Mill Road in Prince Georges County, containing clothing and other property. The jewelry had been taken from the bags, police said.

D. C. Police Invited To Defense Course

District police officials have been invited by the Department of Justice to undergo training for civilian defense in a two-day course here beginning today. The training will be given in 55 cities throughout the country at Federal Bureau of Investigation field division headquarters, it was announced yesterday.

The courses are designed to instruct police officials in the problems of civilian defense work and will cover such subjects as convoy work, guarding protected areas, blackout enforcement, gas decontamination and other phases of emergency police work.

Bishop Scores Pressure to Get Church to Take Sides in War

By Wilbur Jennings

Post Staff Correspondent.

Aquia, Va., Oct. 26.—Striking out at those who would have the church take sides in the present world conflict, the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, D. D., coadjutor Bishop of Richmond, today declared that the Church's answer is that of Chirst to Pilate, "My Kingdom is not of this world." Bishop Ireton scored both the interventionists and isolationists in this country who have been urging the Catholic hierarchy to cast its lot with them.

The bishop spoke before 1000 members of the faith from Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, who had gathered here for the twelfth annual field mass in Brent Cemetery, resting place of Virginia's first Catholic settlers, who came to this country in 1634 to seek religious freedom.

Msgr. Rankin Officiates

Mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. Msgr. Thomas A. Rankin, vicar general of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond and pastor of St. Mary's Church, Alexandria. Among the dignitaries attending was the Right Rev. Msgr. Edward P. McAdams, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Washington, and noted church historian.

A detachment of Marines from the Quantico base served as a guard of honor. Two Marines, Samuel Benko, of Cleveland, Ohio, and John Kelly, of Adrian, Mich., assisted as servers at the mass.

Calling attention to the fact that Msgr. Rankin had offered the masss for peace in the world and that the Catholic Church was observing the feast of Christ the King, Bishop Ireton declared that "peace and justice and charity cannot reign in the souls of men, and therefore in the world, until men enthrone Christ in their hearts and accept His Kingship."

Bishop Ireton said that both the Brents, original English Catholic settlers of the area, and the Spanish Jesuit missionaries who preached the Gospel to the Indians in the same region, had as their objective the peace of Christ. He stated that a memorial had been presented to Pope Pius XII within the last month by the American bishops, asking for the canonization of over 100 early missionaries in this country, among whom are eight Jesuits who came to Aquia or its vicinity, and a Father Christopher Plunkett, an Irish priest, who suffered for his faith from the early English settlers.

Only One Answer

"There are those," Bishop Ireton said, "in Germany and Italy who would have the Holy Father support their attack on communistic Russia. There are also those in the democracies who would have him condemn the totalitarian states. But the children of the Church are everywhere, and the Holy Father can give only one answer: 'My Kingdom is not of this world.'

"So, too, there are in this country, within and without the Church, those who would have the American hierarchy take sides. The interventionists and the isolationists both are clamoring for the support of the Church. Our answer can be only that of the Supreme Pontiff."

Brent Cemetery was purchased by the late Archbishop Dennis J. O'Connell for the Diocese of Richmond and named the late Rev. Walter J. Nott to develop as a shrine of Catholic history.

Near the spot where today's mass was celebrated once stood historical Peace, the home of Margaret Brent, pioneer Catholic woman and suffragist, and her sister, Mary. It was built for them by their brother, Giles Brent, at Aquia, in 1647, when they accompanied him from Maryland with other pioneers and established a lone outpost in the wilderness.

For many years the graves at Aquia were lost in the thicket and underbrush until they were rediscovered in the 1920's.

Colorful Services At Cathedral Honor Girl Scouts

Girl Scout Sunday, observed yesterday with colorful services at the Washington Cathedral, was called "more significant for the future of democracy this year than ever before" by the Rev Charles W. F. Smith, canon missioner of the Cathedral.

"Those who profit from training afforded by membership in the Girl Scouts," said Canon Smith, "will have the means to grasp the opportunity to contribute their part to one of the most important periods of decision in history."

As the service opened, the Girl Scouts marched with their colors to the steps of the Great Choir and recited their oath and the allegiance to the flag. Many families and friends of the Scouts attended.

Citizens Will View Many Films Tonight

Two motion pictures produced by the Navy Department to stimulate interest in its defense recruiting campaign will be presented at the monthly meeting of the Sixth Ward Citizens Association tonight at 8 in the Potomac Community Hall. Newman Raymond will preside over the session in the absence of President R. G. Koiner, who is recuperating from a serious illness.

Entertainment Bombs To Burst on the Capital

War Lays Down Its Amusement Barrage; Those Earle Roxyettes Not an Accident; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS A HEAVY BARRAGE the war will be laying down along the amusement front these next two weeks. During the ensuing fortnight, Washingtonians will find exploding right under their noses high-caliber entertainments that might never have been made available to them save for the necessities created by the bloody horrors of Hitler's madness.

GRACIE FIELDS

Beginning tomorrow night and continuing for four days, with a special midnight show Thursday, Riverside Stadium will house L. C. Miller's "all-star, three-ring circus," for the benefit of Bundles for Britain.

On Saturday night, under the sponsorship of the Washington Variety Club, Gracie Fields, Britain's most popular entertainer, will make her first personal appearance in the National Capital at the head of a galaxy of stars—Harriet Hoctor, Fred Keating, mightiest of the magic-men; Harrison and Fisher, among the best of the ballroom dancers, and many more to be announced—for the benefit of the British War Relief.

Edging in an oar in its own account, America will have a word to say about the need of preserving its own way of life in the Uline Arena on Tuesday night, November 4. This will take the form of the "It's Fun to Be Free" musical revue by Hecht and MacArthur and will bring an imposing array of talent to town, including Burgess Meredith, Martha Scott, Gladys Swarthout, Eddie Dowling, Kitty Carlisle, Larry Adler, Sergeant York and no telling how many more. The proceeds of this one, under the auspices of the stage, screen, radio and arts division of Fight for Freedom, Inc., will go to the United States Defense Council.

Even war clouds sometimes have their silver linings—if anyone is selfish enough to view it that way.

It places no great strain upon the perceptions to recognize why the Earle's Sixteen Roxyettes will be celebrating their third anniversary on Thirteenth Street, come Friday, with the fourth practically in view. The obvious reason, of course, is the extraordinary perfection of the individual and ensemble work that projects itself across the footlights week after week in an amazing variety of intricate routines, many of them involving feats more hazardous than they seem in the easy skill of their execution. But back of that lies the composite matter of intelligence, indomitable spirit, great physical stamina, patience, pep, pulchritude, enthusiasm and probably pride. To find these qualities combined in any one girl between the ages of 17 and 23 is hard enough; to find them in equal combination in 18—two of the Roxyettes always are on vacation—is by way of being a minor miracle. Miracles command attention.

Comedy to Melo to Music to Mystery

There will be a nice change of pace coming up on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater these next few weeks. After the keen Shavian comedy of the current "Major Barbara" will come the big-city thrills of "Unholy Partners"—underworld and tabloid newspaper—with Edward Arnold, Laraine Day and Edward G. Robinson, then Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, John Payne and Cesar Romero in the Technicolored musical, "Weekend in Havana" and, after that, Betty Grable, Victor "Hunk of Man" Mature and Carole Landis in "Hot Spot," burning with mystery and excitement. Keep an eye on the old blood pressure I always say.

With characteristic reticence about such things, the Metropolitan Theater is quietly having its face lifted, or pushed out at the sides, or something. The old dowager must be getting pretty used to it by now. This is the fifth or sixth time within the knowledge of this column that she has submitted to the hacksaws and mallets. When the bandages are removed this time around, her gold fillings will be on the right side, instead of in the middle, and those lines of age all out of her cheeks. She's already wearing some new neon jewelry up her facade. There's evidently life in the old girl yet!

Dots and Dashes

While we think of it, the Motion Picture Herald's bona fide boxoffice champions for September, as announced in the issue of October 25, were "Aloma of the South Seas, "Dive Bomber," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Here Comes Mr. Gordon," "Sun Valley Serenade" and "When Ladies Meet" . . . Two for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one each for Paramount, Warner Brothers, Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox . . . T. C.-F., by the way, is tossing a diamond-studded "permeer" of "How Green Was My Valley," at the Rivoli Theater, New York, tomorrow night, sponsored by a socialite committee, headed by Mrs. Cushing Roosevelt, and with the Navy Relief Society as beneficiary . . . It also will pay honor to Director John Ford, who went into the Navy as a lieutenant commander immediately the picture was put in the cans . . . Ford is the fellow who also made "The Informer," "Grapes of Wrath," "Stagecoach" and a passel of others almost as good . . . Alexander Woollcott—if he can find another battleship to bring him home—will launch himself on another lecture tour upon his return to America from England . . . Route planned by "Bill" Field, of the Playwrights Company, will extend to Houston, Tex., on the south and Pierre, S. Dak., on the north . . . Jan Peerce, tenor soloist at Radio City Music Hall, New York, will sing the President's favorite chanty, "Blow the Man Down," at the Navy Day banquet in the Mayflower tonight . . . The Chief Executive probably isn't thinking of a sailor!

Never-Mind-the-Details Note

If he could be blown up, instead of down, it no doubt would do just as well.

Havoc in the West

JUNE HAVOC, kid sister of Gypsy Rose Lee, goes Hollywood between scenes of "Street Girl," with Ray Bolger, after scoring in "Pal Joey" on Broadway.

A Laurel Wreath of Sorrow, Hardy Smile of Glee!

STAN LAUREL, SHEILA RYAN AND OLIVER HARDY, the trio of funsters who make a frolic of the firing line in "Great Guns," the Twentieth Century-Fox salute to the selectees, now on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater. It marks the return of its stars to the silver sheet after months of inactivity devoted to a quest for the "right vehicle." This seems to be it

Russ Victory Theme of Bill At Trans-Lux

That Russia will hold out seems to be the paramount theme topping the current bill at the Trans-Lux Theater.

Harriman, head of the United States mission to Moscow, reports that Russia will win eventually, with United States aid, while the Red army is showing their expert marksmanship, downing plenty of Nazi planes in thrilling action. Great Britain cheers on hundreds of new tanks bound for the Russian front, as British women "man" antiaircraft guns. Some of the most exciting war pictures so far seen are those of U-boat attacks on unarmed freighters, and Britain's new hurricane fighters attacking Nazi ships at sea, wiping out everything before them. Other war news includes U. S. Marines and soldiers ready for winter in Iceland, U. S. convoy to Iceland, U. S. and Britain launching new planes, and a Nazi U-boat, captured by the British, brought to port.

Domestic, Sports, Shorts Section

Domestic news brings the big train wreck at Rahway, N. J.; Duke and Duchess, in New York; world's largest cement plant at Los Catos, Calif.; wild duck doing a "Victory V" before Mount Shasta, and the glider meet at Wortsboro, N. Y.

Sports are topped with football games, including Navy-Cornell, Michigan-Northwestern, Georgia-Columbia and Army over Yale. There is a final fling at skiing in Australia before summer comes.

The short subjects are unusually well selected, with "Ghost Treasure," the nerve-tingling story of Death Valley, easily taking first place. The Fitzpatrick traveltalk, "Glimpses of Washington State," is fine entertainment, in beautiful color.

Gayety

Bob Carney, one of the cleverest and most versatile performers in burlesque, and the blonde and lovely Mary Joyce are the co-stars of "Swingtime," the current attraction at the Gayety Theater.

If you're a lover of funny stories and ready wit, plus some excellent dancing, the genial Mr. Carney certainly fills the bill. This handsome Irishman, who has performed at some of the finest night spots and theaters around the country, is really a one-man show.

Miss Joyce, who heads the pulchritudinous portion of the bill, entertains with several musical specialties. Our only regret is that Mary isn't seen more often during the bill.

One of the highlights of the attraction is the winsome and very stunning Wynette. Making her initial appearance here, this cute person, with a million-dollar smile, offers several clever dance routines and proves herself a capable "talking woman." Others in the cast include Gypsy Nina, a dark-eyed brunette, who present some colorful dance numbers; Bob Ridley, whose fine tenor voice is heard during many of the ballet numbers, and Cosmo and Anita, a ballroom team whose work is much above average.

Pix

The fall's first "surprise" hit began its second week at the Pix Theater over the weekend. "Quiet Wedding" titles this witty, unassuming English comedy that is generously amusing from its first scene.

There's no message in this picture that was made during the heaviest of the Nazi blitz attacks. It's a simple story of a young couple who are about to be married. It's a perfect match, but like many another couple before and after them, these two have to go through the terrors of the wedding itself. Presents, plans, relatives, friends, everything that one associates with even the smallest wedding assume monstrous proportions that even make the young couple hesitate.

But for the audience it's all fun, this view of two thoroughly uncomfortable people. Margaret Lockwood, whom you'll remember from "Night Train," is the anxious bride, and while most of the others in the cast may be unfamiliar, they are stage names of importance in the West End. Among them are A. E. Mathews, Peggy Ashcroft and Derek Farr.

Departmental Memo

New York, Oct. 26.

COURT DEPT.: Mrs. George S. Kaufman went to Washington last week to see the tryouts of the new Kaufman-Ferber play, "The Land Is Bright." Earlier in the day she visited the United States Supreme Court, and watched the court in session . . . After the recess had been called Mr. Justice William O. Douglas told her: "I'm sure your illustrious husband could stage this better than we do."

WALT DISNEY

BUSINESS DEPT.: The Duke and Duchess of Windsor dined at the Colony Restaurant last week. As they were leaving, they walked by the Paul Flato jewelry display in the lobby . . . The Duchess was about to go, but then returned to that For-Sale display, for a second look. She saw a complete gentleman's evening set—consisting of cigarette case, lighter, cuff-links and studs. They were replicas of the original set Flato had sold her as a present for the Duke.

MUSIC DEPT.: Walt Disney, who just returned from South America, visited a schoolhouse at Mendoza, in the Argentine. He heard the pupils singing "Way Down Upon the Swanee River." Their teacher explained to Disney that this was the way they were being taught to speak English. "And you Americans should try and reciprocate," the teacher told Disney . . . "Very well," he agreed. "When I return to the States, I'll have our schools teach the children 'Way Down Upon the Amazon.'"

THEATER DEPT.: A young actor heard that a new play was being rehearsed at the Belasco Theater. He rushed inside and began to shout—until he met Morris Gest, who commanded: "Be silent. And when you come in here, take your hat off" . . . "But why?" asked the actor . . . "Because," replied Gest, pointing to the vaulted ceiling of the theater erected by his father-in-law, David Belasco, "you're supposed to be an actor, and this—this is the Temple of the Drama."

LOCAL NEWS: The Empress Zita, who is here now, is ailing and requires medical attention . . . Fortune is preparing an article about the British Empire. It will be one of its largest issues . . . W. Averell Harriman will return to his London post within two weeks . . . Artie Shaw will receive $4500 to play for five hours, at a party in Cincinnati, during Christmas week. The contract was signed last Monday . . . Tommy Manville has retained an agent to secure a booking him at Loew's State . . . When the Duke and Duchess of Windsor gave their first dinner party in New York, one of the invited guests—who had accepted their invitation—failed to appear. He's a Rochester, N. Y., business man named Warner—brother of Maj. Warner, head of the New York State Police.

SPORTS DEPT.: At a Maryland racetrack last week, a young lady approached Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and spoke to him about his friends and family. After 10 minutes of embarrassed stalling, Vanderbilt finally said to her: "I beg your pardon. I'm sure I know you—your face is so familiar. But I must confess, your name has just slipped my mind. Please—tell me" . . . "It's Vanderbilt," the young lady informed. "Emily Vanderbilt. I'm your niece."

MOVIES DEPT.: Before Walter Wanger began the production of his new African adventure film, "Sundown," he sent a crew all over the West and Mexico, to find a place resembling Kenya Colony, in Africa. "I want a spot where no white man ever visits," Wagner instructed. They found such a spot—Acoma Rock, N. Mex. Wanger arrived there with his technicians. He met the guide and interpreter, who introduced him to the chief of the Acoma Indian tribe. "Chief say white man here before," the guide translated. As verification, the chief produced a portrait of an ancient ruler of Spain. "Alvarado here before," the guide declared. "Year—1540."

SOCIAL NOTES: Dr. Karl Menninger, the psychiatrist and head of the Menninger Clinic, met Oscar Levant last week. Levant told of the new movie contract he had signed. "Tell me, Oscar," Dr. Menninger asked, "how do you get along with people in Hollywood?" . . . "There are no geographic boundaries to my not getting along with people," Levant replied. "I once said 'Hello'—and a rosebush withered."

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Oct. 26.

During a preview of Tarzan's Secret Treasure," a mother took her young child screaming from the theater. He said, "But Mother, I don't want to go home, I WON'T go home, you can't MAKE me go till the picture's over!" And her reply was, "I've seen you make a monkey of yourself swinging from limb to limb for five years, and I'm not going to have you taught any more tricks." The picture follows the usual patterns, which will no doubt pull in another two million dollar profit.

BETTE DAVIS

Bette Davis said a mouthful the other day: "Whether you're in New York, Hollywood, or New Hampshire, you'll find gossip, and it's all very much alike. But you know, Hedda, I find gossip fascinating. Though the village gossiper has been a stock villain in our pictures and literature, it is she who has lent color to drabness, has betrayed the keenest interest in life. And the harm she's done cannot be compared with the good she's done by feeding people's imagination and creating awareness of and sympathy with the vast and multifarious brotherhood of man."

Otto Kruger's ovation at the opening of "The Male Animal" was really something. Our stars certainly turned out, and Eddie Arnold's famous laugh was better than any paid claeque you ever heard. Otto gave a beautiful performance, and finally had to make a speech before they'd let him go home.

Bob Cummings and his wife flew out from New York, with Bob flying his own plane . . . Martha Raye's been invited by the Naval Academy at Annapolis to be their guest of honor at the Army and Navy game in Philadelphia next month. Pays to work for the Navy, eh!

Betty Brewer, who doesn't own a car, has a chauffeur de luxe these days. Suzanna Foster drives her over the hill to the "Wild Bill Hickock" set.

Stash Clements, the tough kid from Brooklyn, and Roddy MacDowall, the nice youngster from England, couldn't get along together in a picture until Stash discovered Roddy cheering the Dodgers in the late World Series. Since then they're pals.

Gene Autry's got himself into a pickle on his air show. Mothers were advised to put a stick of gum in their children's lunch boxes, and now Gene's swamped with letters from irate teachers complaining of the mass chewing going on!

Since acting in a western, Cedric Hardwicke's become horse-conscious, goes galloping about on the set in full regalia. A coworker at the studio, discussing it with a mutual friend, said, "The guy's chap-happy!"

Laird Cregar's disgustingly evil performance is so good in "Hot Spot" that he dims the light of Betty Grable and Carole Landis, and those blondes are mighty hard to dim.

What a comeback the Duncan sisters are doing in San Francisco! Their burlesque of "Traviata" fits right into their opera season. And how the guests of the Music Box do dance to "Remember?" I hope Hollywood will remember, when they open here.

Bop Hope and Jerry Colonna gave an impromptu show at Red McCullem's "Cafe Society" that was a honey. Among New York Cafe Society, the one out Ventura way and another on Sunset Strip all claiming the original title, it's enough to give a body's head the Social Swim!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The football map of the United States, after last week's upheavals, reads something like this:

POVICH

EAST—Army, Fordham and Penn are the surviving stalwarts of Eastern football at this point. They are the only major teams unmarked by defeat or a tie. That gurgling sound you heard up Boston way was Navy being submerged in a 0-0 tie with Harvard. Navy is still unbeaten but the mention of ties now brings a flush of embarrassment to the Middies.

Paradoxically, on the same afternoon that Navy was dropping from the ranks of the untied and unbeaten, a Cornell team was making Navy look more respectable. Cornell, beaten by Navy, upset Colgate, 21-2. Navy muffed its game with Harvard by making six fumbles. The better football teams don't fumble, that much.

Army, Fordham and Penn are hard to separate, as the horse players would put it. Easiest to eliminate in a selection for top honors in the East would probably be Army whose top boast is its 13-0 victory over Columbia. However, Army did not gain a yard through the air against Columbia. Fordham demonstrated that it is a hard-hitting club by shaking loose from a 14-14 tie with Texas Christian in the last quarter and winning, 28-14. That victory by the Rams, incidentally, probably tops anything unbeaten Penn has achieved. Penn thus far has licked Harvard, Yale, Maryland and Princeton.

The situation in the East will rush toward something of a climax in the next two weeks. Navy has a glowing opportunity to recoup some of its lost prestige by beating Penn on Saturday and a Penn victory would correspondingly permit the Quakers to hold their heads high. On the same afternoon, it will be Army vs. Notre Dame. If Army wins that one, it could be top dog in the East. The week following, of course, it's Notre Dame vs. Navy and if both teams come up to that one unbeaten the winner will have something to shout about.

MIDWEST—Undisputed leader of the parade out there is Minnesota, with its 7-0 victory over Michigan the most coveted triumph of the weekend. Northwestern, meanwhile, eased Minnesota's path to the Big Ten title by outlasting Ohio State in a 14-7 game and blasting the Buckeyes from the ranks of the unbeaten.

It was much the same story of the past four years when Minnesota and Michigan collided. Another swell Michigan team which had already beaten Northwestern, was unable to get over the hump against the Gophers. Again it was Minnesota power that prevailed, and again it was Minnesota turning back Michigan in scoring territory. But Minnesota is not yet out of the woods. Coming up on Saturday is the Northwestern game. It means no rest for the Gophers.

Operating independently in the Midwest is Notre Dame, still a mighty factor, perhaps, in any distribution of National honors. There was a suspicion that Notre Dame, although unbeaten and untied, was not a slick ball club this season, but the Irish turned it on in the last quarter against Illinois with four touchdowns that added up to a 49-14 victory. Notre Dame gets its biggest test on the next two Saturdays with games against Army and Navy.

THE SOUTH—Vanderbilt and Duke still rate as tops in Dixie, despite Mississippi's surprising upset of Tulane by a 20-13 score. Ole Miss' record is tarnished by its opening-game defeat by Georgetown, but Vandy and Duke are rolling along unbeaten.

There is certainly no complaint with the 46-7 score by which Vandy beat Princeton, unless Princeton's seven points are a basis for a beef by Vanderbilt supporters. Duke was occupying itself with a 27-7 victory over Pitt. Duke's power will be tested more precisely on Saturday when the Blue Devils meet an improving Georgia Tech club which downed Auburn, 28-6, and Vanderbilt must hurdle Tulane next week.

SOUTHWEST—There is a growing suspicion at this time that the Nation's all-fired best football team hails from Austin, Tex. The University of Texas is beginning to take on the label of one of the infrequent "wonder teams" with its weekly massacres of the opposition. Texas' latest was its 40-0 rout of Rice, and the Longhorns have been averaging more than 40 points a game. Texas would probably be the favorite to beat any club in the country, with the possible exception of Minnesota. Dana X. Bible's five-year plan at Texas, is seemingly bearing fruit.

FAR WEST—Down went Santa Clara in a surprise defeat by Oklahoma University and there is not now an unbeaten major team on the Pacific Coast. Oregon State, conqueror of Stanford, took a 7-0 licking from Washington State and in a day replete with upsets, Oregon was slapped down, 14-7, by U. C. L. A. The results put Stanford, last year's champions, back in the running for the Conference title and Rose Bowl invitation, despite its early-season upset by Oregon State.

Packers Down Lions, 24-7, for 6th Victory

Belichick, Former Equipment Man, Runs 75 Yds. for Lions' Score; Isbell Brilliant

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 26.—The Opportunist Green Bay Packers achieved their sixth National Football League victory today by turning the Detroit Lions' mistakes into touchdowns while winning, 24 to 7, before 30,269 spectators. Don Hutson caught two touchdown passes and converted three times for a 15-point total.

Three fumbles by the usually reliable Byron (Whizzer) White and a blocked punt led to Green Bay's scoring surge which consisted of three payoff aerials by Cecil Isbell and a 15-yard field goal by veteran Clark Hinkle.

Detroit scored spectacularly in the closing minutes when Steve Belichick, promoted last week from equipment man to second string fullback, raced 75 yards with a punt for a touchdown. Aside from that Detroit penetrated the Packer defense no farther than the 18. —

The Packers, duplicating an earlier victory over Detroit, jumped in front midway of the first period and soon left Big Bill Edwards' club far behind. Andy Uran recovered White's fumble on the Detroit 24 and three plays brought it to the 12.

Hutson Makes Great Catch

Coach Earl (Curly) Lambeau then sent Isbell and Hutson into the game and they clicked on the first play for a touchdown, the little Hutson outsprinting the Detroit defenders in the end zone to make the catch.

Early in the second period Green Bay got position by blocking a punt, but when the attack stalled on the 15 Hinkle neatly booted the ball through the uprights.

The Lions desperately checked two more scoring threats in the period before Isbell again connected by air. Taking the ball on Detroit's 48 after White's punt, Isbell shot a 22-yard pass to Carl Mulleneaux and then hit the same target for the score.

Detroit took up the attack in the third period, with Cotton Price tossing accurate passes. The Lions failed to score but their offense proved to be a good defense for the Packers also went scoreless.

Loyola Bows To St. Mary's

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 26.—Little Loyola University's gallant football team played the role of giant killer for half a football game today but had to yield to the seasoned St. Mary's Gaels in a bruising clash before a capacity crowd of 18,500.

Loyola stunned the Gaels and delighted its backers with two touchdowns in the first quarter, but Halfback Johnny Podesto of Modesto went to work and pitched three perfect strikes and the awakened Gaels went on to a 20-13 triumph to give St. Mary's its sixth consecutive win over the undermanned Lions.

Coach Marty Brill's Loyolans stopped the Gael running attack cold but the Red eleven couldn't stop passing Podesto nor match St. Mary's superior reserve strength.

Chicago Bears Stop Stubborn Steelers, 34-7

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The Chicago Bears, only undefeated team in the National League, walloped the Pittsburgh Steelers today, 34 to 7, for their fifth straight victory in the title race.

The Steelers offered stubborn resistance all the way, appearing to be the best grounded team in blocking and tackling yet to oppose the Bears in Wrigley Field. But the Bears, cheered on by a small crowd of 17,217, had enough precision and power to win, although the champions obviously were at low ebb for this engagement.

Click for Score

Stopped the first time they got the ball, the Bears clicked for a touchdown midway in the first period. Hugh Gallarneau and Bill Osmanski smacked the line for steady gains to the Pittsburgh 24. Sid Luckman passed 11 to John Siegal and Osmanski ran over for the score. Bob Snyder place kicked the point.

Tom Hughes intercepted a pass to set up the second tally. After three running plays netted 11 yards, George McAfee exploded through the line and ran 33 yards to a touchdown. Snyder again added the point.

Late in the same period Luckman passed to Siegal but Alan Donelli intercepted the toss and juggled it. Ken Kavanaugh, Bear end, grabbed the ball and dashed across the goal, the weird pass completion netting a total of 37 yards.

A Lone Goal

The Steelers one successful bid came shortly afterwards when Dick Riffle returned the kickoff 56 yards and then engineered a drive to the Bear 13, aided by a 15-yard penalty. Riffle passed to Joe Hoague for the touchdown and Armand Niccolai place kicked the point.

The fourth Bear touchdown came early in the third period. Four plays gained 18 yards to the Chicago 44. Luckman then passed 24 yards to Hampton Pool who outran the secondary the remaining 32 yards for the touchdown. Intercepted passes kept the Bears away from the Steeler goal thereafter until the final period.

Joe Maniaci and Gallarneau sparked an 85-yard drive for the last score, Gallarneau scoring from the 1. Snyder and Harry Clark intercepted passes in the latter part of the period to offer good scoring

Dodgers Trip Giants, 16-13; Parker Brilliant

Former Duke Star Returns to 1940 Form, Sets Up Plays for 2 Touchdowns, Field Goal

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Oct. 26.—Ace Parker looked like the old Ace Parker today for the first time this year, and as a result the Brooklyn Dodgers downed the New York Giants, 16 to 13, to hand the New Yorkers their first defeat of the National Professional Football League campaign.

The League's most valuable player of 1940, hampered up till now by an ailing leg, passed for one touchdown, pitched and ran 35 yards to put the ball in position for an important field goal and finally dashed 60 yards to set up the winning tally for the entertainment of a highly partisan crowd of 28,675 customers.

All afternoon the former Duke All-American was the particular white-haired lad on the ball field, despite a return to form of Merle Condit, the former Carnegie Tech ball carrier, who kicked the Brooklyn field goal and picked up valuable yardage when it counted, and Frank Reagan, the 1940 Penn All-American, who bowed out of football, at least temporarily, with a brilliant display of running and passing for the Giants. He joins the Marines tomorrow.

Give 13 Points

In upsetting the Giants, who were so highly favored local bookmakers were giving 13 points in the pregame betting, the Dodgers turned in their second victory over the New Yorkers in 11 years.

And they had to come from behind to do it, for the Eastern division leaders scored first in the up-and-down battle when Reagan turned his own left end for four yards and a touchdown in the second quarter, after he had passed and run the ball 44 yards in a one-man march.

After this tally, the Giants kicked off and Brooklyn, receiving on its own 22, drove 78 yards to tie it up. In this scoring parade, Parker passed for 34 yards and ran for ten more and Condit sliced through for 22 before Ace tossed a 12-yarder to California Perry Schwartz for the marker.

Just before the half ended, after a pass interference penalty advanced the Giants to Brooklyn's 17, Win Pedersen, former Minnesota husky, dropped back to the 20 and booted a field goal to put the New Yorkers out in front.

Back came the Dodgers to tie it up again as Condit ran the kickoff opening the second half to the

'Skins Clicked, Then Bogged Down—Coach

"I had a team which really clicked for 10 minutes in the first half and then staggered through the next 50, doing something right one minute and something wrong the next." That was Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty's dressing room summation of the Ram game yesterday.

The redhead was not mad, as he was after the Steeler game. He was a little disappointed. "Every week I figure we might come through with a lead so we can experiment with some new plays and give Dew and Kreuger a chance, but every week it's tough."

The Redskins were tickled with the Dodger victory over the Giants. They are beginning to believe they are opportunists.

Packers' Hutson May Establish Scoring Record

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—The two touchdowns Don Hutson scored in the Green Bay Packers' 24-to-7 triumph over the Detroit Lions today established a record for the number of six-pointers counted by one player in the National Pro Football League. The pair sent Hutson's total to 51.

The previous mark of 50 was set by Vern Lewellen, also of Green Bay. Lewellen collected his total during the years 1924 to 1932. Hutson has been in the league six and a half seasons.

Eagles Cling To Lead, Beat Cards, 21-14

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—The Philadelphia Eagles won their second National League professional football game of the season today, piling up a 21-to-0 lead and then withstanding a savage second-half assault by the Chicago Cardinals that all but tied the score. The final score was 21 to 14, with the Cardinals' bid for the tying touchdown ending on the Eagles' 5-yard line.

A crowd of 12,638 saw the Eagles throw back three Cardinal threats that reached the 13, 17 and 21 yard lines in the first half, then rush over three touchdowns on two end runs by Jim Castiglia and a 12-yard forward pass, Tommy Thompson to Wes McAfee.

The Cardinals took command after that and scored two touchdowns on a 20-yard forward pass from Jonnny Clement to Bill Dewell and a 1-yard line buck by Marshall Goldberg to climax a 72-yard drive.

Marched 55 Yards

In the last five minutes of play the Cardinals marched 55 yards to the Eagles' five, where on fourth down and one to go Clement's pass to Goldberg fell incomplete on the goal line. Len Barnum then kicked to midfield and Norman Feibish intercepted another Clement aerial to kill the last Cardinal hopes.

Altogether, the Cards, aided by their second half rally, made 14 first downs to 9, and outgained the Eagles from all sources, 287 yards to 168. Most of the Cards' gains came on Clement's forward passing, the former Southern Methodist star, along with John Hall, completing 18 of 36 aerials for 217 yards. The

Gonzaga Beats Portland, 19-13

By the Associated Press

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 26.—Portland University's out-manned football team was defeated today by Gonzaga, 19 to 13, after twice evening up the game.

Gonzaga scored in the first period after a 63-yard drive, Fullback Ross plunging over. The try for point was wide. Left Half Farnsworth evened the score for Portland in the second period on a lateral. Portland went ahead when Huntzinger kicked the extra point.

In the fourth period, Gerstenberger scored after a Portland fumble. Goodwin's placement was good. Portland tied the game up immediately, Farnsworth taking a 30-yard pass and racing 33 yards to the goal. The kick was wide.

Todd's 71-Yard Jaunt, Baugh's Pass Decisive

Bob Masterson Boots Field Goal; Hall Shines for Cleveland; 'Skins Near Top

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

The Redskins, with side-stepping Dick Todd spurring them to an early 17-point advantage, shook off a late challenge by the Cleveland Rams and moved back into Eastern pro football championship contention with a 17-13 victory yesterday in Griffith Stadium.

Favored by an ideal football day, 32,280 fans turned out to first cheer Todd, Sammy Baugh and partners for their part in a quick-striking Redskin offensive. And as the victorious Redskins left the field of battle those same fans stayed to applaud the Brooklyn Dodgers, who had handled the leading Giants their first defeat of the season in New York, leaving Coach Ray Flaherty's boys only a half game out of the lead.

Todd had ample support in that early Redskin scoring spree but it was the 71-yard punt return for a touchdown by the former Texas Aggie halfback that made him yesterday's hero.

Early in the first period, the shifty 170-pound punt-return specialist, who despite his slight stature, knows no peer in pro football, stalked under a Parker Hall punt on his own 29-yard line and was off like a shot. He quickly cut by the on-rushing Rams, outdistanced his interference and sped past midfield. Parker Hall was the only man left to stop him and the Ram safety man was jockeying for a tackling position as Todd rushed onward.

Todd Goes Over

Hall faded past his own 20-yard line waiting for the moment to strike and when he did Todd shifted at full speed to the left, let go an old-fashioned stiff arm and nearly lost his balance, but recovered and completed a magnificent run for a touchdown. His proud mates and the

Blind Golfer Beats Teacher for Title

By International News Service

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 26.—The pupil outshone the master today as 37-year-old Marvin Shannon, of Fort Worth, defeated 45-year-old Clinton Russell, of Duluth, Minn., 8 and 7, in a match for the world's blind golfing championship.

With Skeet Fincher, professional at the Rockwood municipal course, instructing him on the proper execution of his unseen shots, Shannon displayed driving and putting ability that amazed the 1000 onlookers.

Russell, whose "eyes" were those of Jim Koehler, Duluth City amateur champion, was decidedly off his game today, especially with his short shots.

Three thousand gallery tickets were sold for the match, receipts from which went to the Lighthouse for the Blind, an organization for the aid of blind workers.

The possibility of a play-off at Duluth was expressed by Amon Carter, Fort Worth publisher, who presented trophies to both the contestants. Russell beat Shannon, 3 and 2, at Duluth last summer.

Shannon, blinded by fever at the age of 12, had never tried to play golf until he learned about Russell's ability from a newspaper article three years ago. He wrote Russell, who lost his sight when an automobile tire threw sand in his eyes 16 years ago. And the latter wrote back encouragement and instruction.

Today Shannon showed he is an apt pupil by netting only a 52 for the front nine, while Russell took a 53. The match lasted 3 hours and 10 minutes.

"Jarrin Jawn" battered the Buffalo Tigers for 56 minutes, carrying the ball 19 times for 84 yards, and led the second-place Americans to a 31-to-14 triumph at the Yankee Stadium.

Kimbrough scored the Americans' first touchdown on three rushes from the Tiger 4 after Andy Karpus had fumbled Bill Hutchinson's 67-yard punt on the Buffalo 9. Shortly before the end of the quarter, Hutchinson sped 40 yards for the Americans' second touchdown.

The Tigers scored twice in the third quarter. They went 76 yards on 16 plays after the kickoff, with Merle Osborne bucking over from the 1. Osborne crossed from the same point five minutes later after a Tiger parade of 77 yards in seven plays.

Kimbrough contributed 20 yards to an American advance of 71 yards in the final period, leading to the New Yorkers' last touchdown, which was scored on Hutchinson's 2-yard pass to Al Owen in the end zone.

Dodgers Upset Giants, 16-13

Dodger 45 and Parker pitched two aerials to the Giant 13. Condit then dropped back and kicked a 20-yard three-pointer.

With five seconds to go in the third quarter, Ward Cuff, the Giants' place-kicking expert, kicked a field goal from the Brooklyn 15 after Tuffy Leemans and Len Eshmont spear-headed a 59-yard drive.

But, as the final chapter opened, Parker turned in the top dash of the day when he broke over his own right tackle and outgalloped the New York secondary for 60 yards to the Giant 20 before he was nailed. From there, Condit picked up 15 in two tries and it was no trick at all for big Pug Manders from Drake to put his head down and bull his way through for the touchdown that decided the game.

They do not win by big scores, or look too good in victory, but the point is that they are doing all right in the won and lose column.

Wilbur Moore came out of the game with a charley horse from a kick in the left thigh but otherwise the squad will be in shape for tomorrow's workout. That is, excepting Bob Hoffman, the blocking back who is still in the hospital and Bill Young, the big guard who watched the game from the stands due to his leg injury. Hoffman may be in the hospital another ten days while Young will be out at least two more weeks.

Notes—The Redskins get the best of it next week with the Steelers here and the Giants entertaining the sometimes dangerous Chicago Cardinals. The half-game difference in the standing is that the Giants have played, and won, one more game . . . The Rams looked good in the first 25 minutes yesterday—coming out of the huddle. They snapped up to the line like champions but stopped there.

Probably the outstanding play of the game was a block by Paul McDonough, the Cleveland end, who took three Redskins out like tenpins early in the third quarter. He was paving the way for a punt return by Parker Hall.

set up the final Packer score, although the Lions took the ball on downs and then gave it back when White again fumbled. This time Charley Brock scooped it up and ran 10 yards to the six, whence Isbell found Hutson with another pass for the score.

With five minutes to play Bellichick gave the Detroit partisans a thrill when he grabbed the bounding ball, eluded three Packer linemen and twisted down the sideline and into the clear. Augie Lio place-kicked the extra point.

Green Bay, making 18 first downs to 12, accumulated 438 yards by passing and rushing and completed all but ten of their 25 passes.

Phillips, Former Reds' Pitcher, Dies

Charleroi, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—William C. Phillips, 72, former pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds and baseball manager in the Federal League, died last night. Bill McKechnie, present manager of the Reds, is among prominent baseball figures who got their start through Phillips.

A native of Allenport, Pa., he played with Indianapolis of the American Association, then put in 13 years with the Reds. He retired from active baseball in 1916 to enter business here.

While Todd's run was a supreme thrill for the bleacherites, Sammy Baugh and Bob McChesney teamed on a second Redskin touchdown play for the fans at the opposite end of the field early in the second quarter.

Slingin' Sam, the proud father of a two-weeks-old son, had engineered a Redskin drive to the 14-yard line with a series of pass completions to Ed Justice and Bob McChesney. Two touchdown tries failed at this point, but on the third, Baugh whipped a bullet pass, never more than chest high, to McChesney in the end zone.

The first Redskin score was Bob Masterson's second field goal of the season. A 45-yard drive apparently was for naught until Masterson, with fourth down and 11 to go, stepped back to his 24-yard line. His foot wobbled to the left of the post but the both-sides offside signal was given and, granted a reprieve, Masterson made good on his second attempt. It was the fourth straight game in which field goals have played an important part in Redskin triumphs, two of them won by three points and two by four.

Shares Honors

Masterson shared point after touchdown honors with Ki Aldrich, the former Cardinal center, both making good.

Sammy Baugh's passing was his second best weapon yesterday, however. He starred in the quick-kicking department and boasted a 62-yard average for a quartet of the sneak-boots, the longest of which traveled 71 yards from the line of scrimmage and nearly 100 yards over all.

The Redskins, now looking for the first time this season like last year's sectional champs, suddenly found the Rams in action and through the remainder of the second period and the entire last half, the Redskins were a scoreless outfit. In fact not until Sammy Baugh rushed over a first down with only seconds remaining did the winners complete a 10-yard advance.

When you speak of Cleveland touchdowns, speak of Parker Hall. The former Mississippi back, who pitched the Rebels to victory over George Washingtton here three years ago before attaining immediate stardom in the professional ranks, was a familiar figure yesterday.

His 14 pass completions led to both touchdowns and where the Redskin line twice buckled down and held the charging Johnny Drake, Hall took things in his own hands.

An Andy Farkas fumble on his own 24, pounced on by Northwestern's Johnny Haman, gave the Rams an opportunity to take to the offensive late in the second quarter and they replied with a touchdown.

Hall passed to Drake for 12 yards and the former Purdue back, known as the hardest man to stop throughout the circuit, scattered the Redskin line for six more. Here Hall faded back and shot a firm pass to Rookie Howard Hickey in the end zone. Adams' try for the seventh point was blocked, and so at the half it stood 17 to 6.

The Rams batted only .500 in genuine scoring threats in that second half, thanks to one of the finest goal line stands of the season by the Redskins. Riley Matheson first intercepted a Frank Filchock pass and was stopped on the Redskin 24. Hall passed to McDonough for 11 and Drake worked the ball to the six.

Here the spectators anticipated a bullish rush by Johnny Drake and they were not far wrong. He made four yards on one drive but then made only one and the next time he was stopped for only six inches. It was fourth down, 2½ yards to go now, with the Drake in the ball-carrying slot again. He charged at the line, leaped into the air and fired a pass to Maury Patt in the end zone but the Ram end was a split second too late and the ball fell harmlessly out of reach.

The Rams finally scored a second touchdown the hard way, completing it with seven minutes remaining in the fourth period. It was a Hall-inspired drive, alternating passes to Hickey and Dante Magnani with the latter coming through on an occasional reverse.

The climax was reached on the 16-yard line when Hall hurriedly fired a low pass to Hickey, who was running full speed to the left-hand corner. He snatched it at his shoe-tops and staggered out of bounds, apparently stepping into the end zone just before leaving the field but the referee said no and the ball rested on the 1. Drake, a trifle weary and without his early drive, was twice thrown back at line thrusts. On what looked to be another Drake thrust, Hall took the ball instead and on a perfectly executed play cut back away around the right side for a touchdown. Adams converted.

Ram and Redskin strategy in the late stages was all in favor of the hosts. Hall was replaced by Gaylon Smith, a third-year man from Southwestern, and the latter's desperate passing came to a sudden end when Bob Tichenal intercepted one to insure a Redskin victory. Dick Farman, on the previous play, had smacked Smith for an 11-yard loss.

Titchenal was a fresh substitution for Ky Aldrich, who only a set of downs before had intercepted a Hall toss to stop cold a potential Cleveland touchdown march.

Pavich Holds 2-1 Margin In D. C. Scoring

Chris Pavish, Georgetown's slick and slender junior end, took a 2-1 margin of leadership over his nearest rival in the District college individual scoring race last weekend.

The 178-pound former all-Illinois State wingman grabbed a 13-yard pass from Benny Reiges in the Boston College game to score his fourth tally of the season and boost his point total to 24. Tied for second place at 12 points are four players: two from Maryland and one each from George Washington and American University.

They are Fullbacks Jack Wright and John Cordyack of Maryland, Fullback Walter Fedora of George Washington and End Paul Weidler of American.

Bulvin Is Third

Behind this quartet comes Georgetown's Benny Bulvin in third place with nine markers. Deadlocked for fourth spot each with one touchdown are Fullback Jack Mier, Halfback Mearle DuVall and End Bob James, all of Maryland; Fullback Joe Gyrogydeak, Halfback Jack Doolan and End Art Lemke, of Georgetown; Halfback Jim Graham and End Sten Zlobro of George Washington, and Halfbacks Russ Arnaud and Russ Atkisson of American University.

Merrill Hoover, sure-footed American U. guard, took over the top rung for conversions when he booted two for two as the Eagles lost to Allegheny, 20 to 14, to make his total four, as against three for Bulvin.

Two Newcomers

Only newcomers to this week's point columns are A. U.'s Atkisson and Mac Potter, the latter and end who helped his fellow flankmen continue their sparkling efforts to outscore the city's backs.

The ends-backs scoring controversy now stands at 10 touchdowns for the ends and 14 for the backs, but since there are twice as many backs in a line-up as ends, the flankmen still have a pronounced edge in this battle. In total points the backs lead, 84 points to 61, the ends' extra one being a conversion by Duke Alexander.

The team scoring race changed but little over the weekend. Cold statistics cast a most unpleasant light on District football. They show our four local teams have scored only 157 points in 19 games, while their opponents have amassed 306. Maryland is responsible for most of this discrepancy, having yielded 50 points to Duke and 55 to Penn.

D. C. College Elevens, All Beaten, Get Slight Respite

G. W. Is Only Team Facing Tough Foe

Hoyas Idle, Terps To Meet Rutgers; Colonials Tangle With Clemson Friday

By Jack Munhall

The District's punch-drunk quartet of college football teams finally will get a respite this week, when only George Washington will be called upon to face an obviously superior rival.

Georgetown will take the weekend off to rest for its November 8 date with North Carolina State, while G. W.'s Colonials encounter a rebounding Clemson eleven Friday night at Griffith Stadium. On Saturday Maryland's much battered Terrapins travel to New Brunswick to play Rutgers while American University's Eagles will remain here to meet Randolph-Macon at Woodrow Wilson Stadium.

For Georgetown this off date which was to have been filled by a charity engagement with a service team for benefit of the USO will be more than welcome. The Hoyas returned from their bruising battle with Boston College's massive men none too robust. Ace Back Benny Bulvin's damaged ankle needs time to mend and sophombre Fullback Joe Gyorgydeak, who left the B. C. game early in the second half, can also benefit greatly by a breathing spell. Other Hoyas, too, will find a week's vacation from competition a happy time. Among them is All-America tackle candidate Al Blozis who now is 20 pounds under his 1940 playing weight of 250.

Terps in Trouble

Maryland which has been outscored 118 points to 18 in its last three games will be, in no position to improve its low football rating by playing a Rutgers team whose most recent effort resulted in a 49-7 defeat by Syracuse. But at least the tired Terps will be meeting a team considerably more in its class than were Duke and Penn.

American University was a disappointment again last Saturday, blowing a 14-0 lead and bowing to Allegheny, 20-14, but should have a good chance to pay Randolph-Macon, an old rival, back for many lickings of the past. This should be a good game between a pair of evenly matched opponents.

There is little to explain about last weekend's happenings in which the four local colleges, after two close escapes, finally succeeded in losing en masse.

Georgetown, in dropping a 14-6 decision to Boston College, played about as well as could be expected of a team that was without its ace back, Benny Bulvin, and which lost its only other consistent gainer of the day, Fullback Joe Gyrogydeak, early in the third period.

The Hoyas, whose attack never is potent, were a feeble lot without Bulvin, and proved once again that they haven't the punch to hope to win in big-time competition. And B. C. is big-time competition. Make no mistake on that. The Eagles have several good backs, a starting line averaging at least 210 pounds and a real all-America tackle in 220-pound Gil Bouley who just about wrecked Georgetown's offense all by himself. Georgetown justifiably is proud of its star tackle, Blozis, but Bouley several times made Blozis appear as a rank amateur. They played opposite each other.

No Excuse for G. W.

There is practically nothing to be said that hasn't already been said about George Washington's amazing collapse against William and Mary. Coach Bill Reinhart and his players honestly thought they had a good chance to win that one. Why the Colonials not only did not win but also suffered one of the worst defeats in its modern history is reflected clearly in the statistics.

Running George Washington gained only 48 yards to 206 for William and Mary. Passing, the Colonials completed only two of seven for 20 yards, and in addition had one intercepted and run back for a touchdown. The figures on G. W.'s ground gains were not impressive in themselves, but when you realize that on one running play Fullback Walter Fedora ran 47 yards, then you have the full picture of G. W.'s completely inept offense at other times. In other words, if the statistics were accurate, toss out Fedora's run and the Colonials would have netted one yard for their night's work.

Former Georgetown Ace Gains for Eagles Against Cards

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Jenkins' 2042 Wins Campbell Sweepstakes

Smashing through with a brilliant 150 game in his last string, Lou Jenkins, Washington's No. 1 ranking bowler, staved off the threats of several local and Eastern topnotchers to win the sixteenth renewal of the Howard Campbell Classic last night with a total score of 2042.

He missed the all-time record for the event, held by Ed Blakeney, by only two sticks as he ran into difficulty in the last frame and counted only six. Perce Wolfe, of Hyattsville, rolled into second place with a total of 2016, and third money went to Billy Stalcup, of Rosslyn, with 1991. Others who placed were Ed Blakeney, the 1930 winner, who totaled 1988; Monk Walker, fifth, with 1978, and last place went to Lee Seim, of Baltimore, with 1965.

Jenkins' victory was worth $400 to him and it was a win he well deserved, as he has been knocking at the door in many tournaments so far this year, only to lose out in the closing moments.

Block prizes, worth $25 each went to Ollie Pacini with 171 and Tony Santini with 690 in the first round. Paul Fitzgerald had high set in the second with 702, with Lou Pohl, Baltimore high with a 168 game and Harry Hilliard with 722 and Angelo Pallidino of Hagerstown, Md. with 183 were tops for the final heat.

Howard Campbell, ranked No. 1 in the United States a decade ago and for whom the event is named, momentarily returned to his old form when he counted a fine 661 set in the second block, but found the pace too hot from that point on.

There were 44 entries in the tourney and a total prize list of $1100 was paid and Lou Jenkins will also receive the diamond medal which is always awarded to the winner of the Classic.

Henry Wrestles Boesch Thursday

Big Jim Henry, better known as The Green Hornet, and Paul Boesch, yesterday were rematched for a double windup role on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

The Hornet and Boesch grappled to a 30-minute draw last week, and the match was packed with such action that fans demanded a return bout.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

FORDHAM, 28; T. C. U., 14—Dear Stanford: Want to invite a true representative of the East to your Rose Bowl game, and get away from such ersatz Eastern foes as Nebraska? Hmm, I thought not. But remember, when and if you snub Fordham, you'll be evading just about the best there is. This is Crowley's best team. He has backs like Ben Babula sitting on the bench who'd be stars on other top-flight teams. Off Saturday's victory, the club might be a little sharper on pass defense, but it is hard to imagine a college club with more brute power or scoring punch. Don't say we didn't tell you, after you invite San Diego Teachers to represent the East.

CONSIDINE

MINNESOTA, 7; MICHIGAN, 0—Looks like Michigan lost Harmon and six points. Michigan's famed old "punt, pass, prayer" system boomeranged. Bruce Smith, who'll probably be chosen All-America on 95 per cent of the 418 official All America teams, put Michigan on the run by pouring himself into a 78-yard punt that went over Tom Kuzma's head like a triple to the flagpole. Presently he passed 43 yards to Herman Frickey to put the bladder in scoring position on the 5-yard line. Then he was hurt, and the ardent prayer of the Gophers, who have now won 13 straight over three seasons is that he can be patched up to last the rest of the season.

ARMY, 13; COLUMBIA, 0—Four straight for the identical Army team which at this time last year had been beaten 45-0 by Cornell, had lost two other games and had managed to beat Williams only, and then by one point. First time in years that the Cadets have come up to the Notre Dame game (next Saturday) unbeaten. Columbia might well have beaten Georgia last week, and presumably was as good Saturday. To have predicted at the start of the year that Army would be not only defeating but trouncing this kind of company, would have made an expert eligible for the nut house.

NAVY, 0; Harvard, 0—One of the biggest surprises in Naval circles since the monitor went into action. But this was no great blow to Navy. Its early season claim of great defensive merit still holds good. It has given up only two points this year. Dick Harlow had Harvard in a froth for this one, and it took a first-class team to hold the Harvards when twice they got close enough to reach out and score. Swede Larsen said after the game that if Peabody, the Harvard guard from Groton, no less, doesn't make All-America, there ain't no justice.

TEXAS, 40; RICE, 0—This must prove something very significant to addicts of comparative scores. Tulane, judged by many to be about as good as anything there is, lost to this game Rice. What does that make Texas? Anyway, Dana Bible's team with its limitless talent, has become the pride and despair of the profession. The runaway score probably was induced by a thirst for revenge. Rice won last year, 13-0, which means that Texas, in this case at least, has improved 53 points over last year.

NOTRE DAME, 49; ILLINOIS, 14—It's hard to believe, looking at that final score, that for a long time Saturday this appeared to be the annual upset which keeps Bob Zuppke in his job. Illinois led 7-0, and the score was Notre Dame, 21; Illinois, 14, in the fourth quarter, then Biff, Blooie, ! ! & ?) / zok, boom! See final score.

STANFORD, 13; WASHINGTON, 7—The coast league may be catching on to the T, but apparently Stanford is going to stay ahead of the pack in other departments. That remarkable southpaw, Frankie Albert, won this one because he doesn't play or think according to Hoyle. He bewildered Washington as much by ploughing 5 yards to a first down in his own territory, on fourth down, as did any piece of Clark Shaughnessy's magic.

TOUGALOO, 31; TALLADEGA, 7—Wal, bus' mah britches. The guys who dream up those weekly football ratings probably will use this to drop unbeaten Duke down another notch.

Eagles Cling To Lead, Beat Cards, 24 to 14

Eagles, with Tommy Thompson doing most of the tossing, completed 10 of 12 passes for 99 yards.

Dick Humbert ripped the pants off Goldberg in making a tackle in the first quarter and the Eagles took advantage of the hasty exit of the former Pitt star to start their first touchdown drive.

Taking over on their own 34, Castiglia, Fred Golden and Foster Watkins put together four running plays to the Cardinal 34 before a penalty and a 6-yard loss temporarily stalled the advance.

Barnum then booted out of bounds on the Cardinal 8 and John Martin's return punt carried only to his own 43. A pass to John Shonk and another to Bob Krieger made first down on the 14, before Thompson executed a perfect fake and sneaked through the line to the 4. Castiglia then crossed standing up on a wide end run and de Santis booted the extra point.

Four minutes later the Eagles had their second touchdown after a 57-yard advance. Most of the yardage on this drive came on Thompson's bullet-like aerials. He hurled five forwards to cover most of the ground, the last one to McAfee being good for 12 yards and the score. McAfee converted and it was 14-0 at the half.

Lyle Graham's interception of a Cardinal pass set up the Eagles' third score soon after the second half kickoff. Graham ran 22 yards to the Cards' 20, then Thompson hurled two passes to Humber that put the ball on the 3 from where Castiglia ran wide around end for his second six pointer. McAfee again converted.

The tide turned a few minutes later when McAfee's fumble was recovered by Frank Balazs on the Eagle 39. Clement lost 12, but passed to Lou Zontini for 21 yards. Balazs made it first down on the 25, then caught a pass on the 20. There Clement tossed a perfect toss to Dewell in the end zone. Zontini converted.

The Cards started their 72-yard march for their second score after Nick Basca punted to the Cards '28 late in the third period. With Frank Ivy snaring three of Clement's passes the Cards moved to the Eagle 24. Clement then got loose for a 15-yard run to the 9 and a six-yard plunge to the 3. Goldberg smashed to the 1 and then lunged over. Bill Daddio kicked the extra point to end scoring for the afternoon.

Deyoe Is Victor In Skeet Opening

U The brand new Potomac Skeet and Trapshooting Club was opened yesterday near Hyattsville with a veteran shooting star sweeping the field.

George Deyoe, police officer, took the high over-all with 185x200. His 99 hits was best in the 12-gauge event, in the 20-gauge affair he scored 48 and in the 410-gauge his record was 38.

Gene Sarazen, Heafner Win; Spencer Quits

Gene Sarazen made another of his popular Washington appearances yesterday in an exhibition match at East Potomac and fashioned a two-under-par 70 over the windy layout to pair with Clayton Heafner in a 2-and-1 triumph over Cliff Spencer and Mel Shorey.

Spencer, the host professional, announced his resignation at East Potomac following the match. The long hitter who led the Nation's National Open qualifiers this year said it was effective immediately.

Spencer is concluding his second year as teaching professional at the public course. He will immediately take over a position in the Government.

Sarazen, pounding the ball like a champion and accurate as ever around the greens, was the individual star of the match although Heafner, the big North Carolinian and a second-year star in the pro ranks, was just one shot back with a 71.

Shorey, former pro at the host club and now at Indian Spring, was even par with a 72, while Spencer was back with a 76 as he was unquestionably playing under a mental strain.

KENWOOD

J. C. Dale scored a hole-in-one on the seventeenth at Kenwood yesterday, using a five-iron for the perfect shot on the 170-yard par three. C. Henry Cohen, Bill Wenzel and Scott Rigby were his playing partners.

Dale and Cohen had previously advanced to the finals of the first flight in the club two-man team championship, winning on the eighteenth over William Briggs and Ralph Benner. They will meet George Vass and Frank Schrider in next week's finals as the latter team won over V. G. Myers and Dr. J. W. Nesbitt, 4 and 3.

In the second flight of the two-man tourney C. L. Valle and S. E. Carpenter defeated T. F. Alverson and A. H. Youngquist, 2 and 1, and will meet the winner of the R. A. Weaver-L. N. Shade vs. William Burch-C. A. Miller encounter. The tandem of William Cannon and E. Blackham won over Richard Nash and Richard Chamberlain, 1 up, and will meet the winner of the H. D. Barber-H. T. Morse vs. Dr. L. B. Gaffney-Dr. H. P. Parker match in the third bracket.

BANNOCKBURN

Billy Houghton and William Pendergast accounted for gross honors in the scotch foursome play at Bannockburn with an alternate shot 69, one under par. Two teams tied for net, Ancel Cleary and Frank Hanrahan, 84-22, 62, and John Mossberg-E. L. Crill, 77-15, 62.

CONGRESSIONAL

T. J. Groom and M. J. McMillan tied with three-under par scores in the Match Play Against Par competition at Congressional.

Miss Hardwick And Wyatt Net Winners

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 26.—Three British tennis stars, former Davis Cup and Wightman Cup players, teamed with two midshipmen today at the Naval Academy in a series of exhibition matches before a capacity crowd of 1,500.

Mary Hardwick defeated Mrs. Dorothy Round Little, 6—4, 6—4, in the opening exhibition which proved to be the feature match of the day. Miss Hardwick's speed was too much for her former Wightman Cup teammate, although Mrs. Round displayed a powerful forehand and backhand.

In the men's singles, Midshipman Elston Wyatt defeated Charles Hare, ranked No. 1 British amateur, 8-6. Midshipman Joe Hunt teamed with Mrs. Little to defeat Miss Hardwick and Hare, 6—4, 6—2, in the mixed doubles.

Art Hendrick, Navy tennis coach, said it was the first time professional women tennis players ever had appeared on the academy courts.

The matches were played in brisk, chill weather. The British players are playing a series of exhibition matches at a number of Southern universities.

Lawrence Coach Injured After Team Wins

Big Rapids, Mich., Oct. 26 (AP).—Lawrence Tech of Detroit beat Ferris Institute 19 to 6 in a football game last night and the only person injured was 280-pound Coach Don Ridler of Tech.

Ridler fell in a gulley near the field house after the game and five stitches were required to close a cut in his hand. He was treated at a hospital.

Dogs . . .

—By George Berner

BERNER

Well, the big show is over and the officers and members of the National Capital Kennel Club are to be congratulated. It was a swell show, and many local owners, showing for the first time, had the time of their lives. If you didn't show your dog you missed something, and if you didn't go, you missed more. We were there, got beat and had a fine time doing it.

Q. Following the constant advice in your column to take sick dogs to veterinarians, I took my scottie to Dr. —— last week, and the next day he died. You can't tell me these vets know what they're doing. He had been sick four weeks and was getting better until I took him to the vet.

A. Obviously you're the type of fellow that can't be told anything. We have warned dog owners constantly through this column to take their dogs to vets instead of doctoring them at home, but we also cautioned to get the dog to the doctor early or not later than 48 hours after he had become ill. Why in the world you waited four weeks before taking your scottie to a doctor only you will ever know, but the delay probably killed him.

Q. Is it advisable to breed a bitch every time she comes in season? A friend tells me to do it, as he says I can only breed her for about six years and I should get as many puppies as possible.

A. If you don't care what quality puppies you have or what happens to the bitch, you may breed her twice a year, but if you want good puppies and value the bitch at all, you will breed her not more than once each year.

Q. I have a dog that seems to crave fats. She is quite thin and will eat anything with fat on it. In fact, she will eat and apparently relish just plain fat or suet. A friend who used to raise dogs says her system needs it and to feed it to her. He says that when her system has had enough she will stop eating fats. Is this correct and shall I fed her fats and suet?

A. Your friend is absolutely correct. Your dog is apparently run down, and with cold weather coming up she does need fats. Feed her fat meat and some suet. Balance this, though, with one of the better dry dog foods.

Q. I have a litter of spitz puppies and would like to register them. How do I go about it?

A. Sorry, but you just don't. The American Kennel Club has not as yet recognized the spitz as a pure-bred of dog, so they cannot be registered.

Q. A friend of mine who knows you tells me that you very seldom lose a puppy. I would like to know the secret.

A. Sorry, but there isn't any secret. Keep the bitch, and subsequently the puppies, free of worms. Have them inoculated against distemper as soon as your vet thinks advisable, and wean them on scraped beef and milk. Beef, milk and a good dry dog food in about equal parts from then on, and barring accidents, you should raise your puppies.

Q. What book would you advise the novice dog owner to buy? I want to breed dogs and want a book that will help me.

A. Get Will Judy's "Dog Encyclopedia" and follow what you find there. You need no other book or books. The encyclopedia is as complete as any volume ever written on any subject.

Q. How often should a dog be wormed?

A. That's exactly like asking how often you should take morphine or aspirin. A dog should be wormed when he needs it, and your vet must decide that. Be suspicious, though, if his coat gets dull and shabby and he appears unthrifty generally. Remember, though, that probably four out of five dogs which are wormed at home don't need it and that worming has killed more dogs than the worms.

New York, Oct. 26.—John Kimbrough, a colossal flop in his debut last week, earned his first professional football bravos from 13,666 New York fans today.

"Jarrin Jawn" battered the Buffalo Tigers for 56 minutes, carrying the ball 19 times for 84 yards, and led the second-place Americans to a 31-to-14 triumph at the Yankee Stadium.

Kimbrough scored the Americans' first touchdown on three rushes from the Tiger 4 after Andy Karpus had fumbled Bill Hutchinson's 67-yard punt on the Buffalo 9. Shortly before the end of the quarter, Hutchinson sped 40 yards for the Americans' second touchdown.

The Tigers scored twice in the third quarter. They went 76 yards on 16 plays after the kickoff, with Merle Osborne bucking over from the 1. Osborne crossed from the same point five minutes later after a Tiger parade of 77 yards in seven plays.

Kimbrough contributed 20 yards to an American advance of 71 yards in the final period, leading to the New Yorkers' last touchdown, which was scored on Hutchinson's 2-yard pass to Al Owen in the end zone.

Dodger 45 and Parker pitched two aerials to the Giant 13. Condit then dropped back and kicked a 20-yard three-pointer.

With five seconds to go in the third quarter, Ward Cuff, the Giants' place-kicking expert, kicked a field goal from the Brooklyn 15 after Tuffy Leemans and Len Eshmont spear-headed a 59-yard drive.

But, as the final chapter opened, Parker turned in the top dash of the day when he broke over his own right tackle and outgalloped the New York secondary for 60 yards to the Giant 20 before he was nailed. From there, Condit picked up 15 in two tries and it was no trick at all for big Pug Manders from Drake to put his head down and bull his way through for the touchdown that decided the game.

They do not win by big scores, or look too good in victory, but the point is that they are doing all right in the won and lose column.

Wilbur Moore came out of the game with a charley horse from a kick in the left thigh but otherwise the squad will be in shape for tomorrow's workout. That is, excepting Bob Hoffman, the blocking back who is still in the hospital and Bill Young, the big guard who watched the game from the stands due to his leg injury. Hoffman may be in the hospital another ten days while Young will be out at least two more weeks.

Notes—The Redskins get the best of it next week with the Steelers here and the Giants entertaining the sometimes dangerous Chicago Cardinals. The halfgame difference in the standing is that the Giants have played, and won, one more game . . . The Rams looked good in the first 25 minutes yesterday—coming out of the huddle. They snapped up to the line like champions but stopped there.

Probably the outstanding play of the game was a block by Paul McDonough, the Cleveland end, who took three Redskins out like tenpins early in the third quarter. He was paving the way for a punt return by Parker Hall.

set up the final Packer score, although the Lions took the ball on downs and then gave it back when White again fumbled. This time Charley Brock scooped it up and ran 10 yards to the six, whence Isbell found Hutson with another pass for the score.

With five minutes to play Bellichick gave the Detroit partisans a thrill when he grabbed the bounding ball, eluded three Packer linemen and twisted down the sideline and into the clear. Augie Lio place-kicked the extra point.

Green Bay, making 18 first downs to 12, accumulated 438 yards by passing and rushing and completed all but ten of their 25 passes.

While Todd's run was a supreme thrill for the bleacherites, Sammy Baugh and Bob McChesney teamed on a second Redskin touchdown play for the fans at the opposite end of the field early in the second quarter.

Slingin' Sam, the proud father of a two-weeks-old son, had engineered a Redskin drive to the 14-yard line with a series of pass completions to Ed Justice and Bob McChesney. Two touchdown tries failed at this point, but on the third, Baugh whipped a bullet pass, never more than chest high, to McChesney in the end zone.

The first Redskin score was Bob Masterson's second field goal of the season. A 45-yard drive apparently was for naught until Masterson, with fourth down and 11 to go, stepped back to his 24-yard line. His foot wobbled to the left of the post but the both-sides offside signal was given and, granted a reprieve, Masterson made good on his second attempt. It was the fourth straight game in which field goals have played an important part in Redskin triumphs, two of them won by three points and two by four.

Shares Honors

Sammy Baugh's passing was his second best weapon yesterday, however. He starred in the quick-kicking department and boasted a 62-yard average for a quartet of the sneak-boots, the longest of which traveled 71 yards from the line of scrimmage and nearly 100 yards over all.

The Redskins, now looking for the first time this season like last year's sectional champs, suddenly found the Rams in action and through the remainder of the second period and the entire last half, the Redskins were a scoreless outfit. In fact not until Sammy Baugh rushed over a first down with only seconds remaining did the winners complete a 10-yard advance.

When you speak of Cleveland touchdowns, speak of Parker Hall. The former Mississippi back, who pitched the Rebels to victory over George Washingtton here three years ago before attaining immediate stardom in the professional ranks, was a familiar figure yesterday.

His 14 pass completions led to both touchdowns and where the Redskin line twice buckled down and held the charging Johnny Drake, Hall took things in his own hands.

An Andy Farkas fumble on his own 24, pounced on by Northwestern's Johnny Haman, gave the Rams an opportunity to take to the offensive late in the second quarter and they replied with a touchdown. Hall passed to Drake for 12 yards and the former Purdue back, known as the hardest man to stop throughout the circuit, scattered the Redskin line for six more. Here Hall faded back and shot a firm pass to Rookie Howard Hickey in the end zone. Adams' try for the seventh point was blocked, and so at the half it stood 17 to 6.

The Rams batted only .500 in genuine scoring threats in that second half, thanks to one of the finest goal line stands of the season by the Redskins. Riley Matheson first intercepted a Frank Filchock pass and was stopped on the Redskin 24. Hall passed to McDonough for 11 and Drake worked the ball to the six.

Here the spectators anticipated a bullish rush by Johnny Drake and they were not far wrong. He made four yards on one drive but then made only one and the next time he was stopped for only six inches. It was fourth down, 2½ yards to go now, with the Drake in the ball-carrying slot again. He charged at the line, leaped into the air and fired a pass to Maury Patt in the end zone but the Ram end was a split second too late and the ball fell harmlessly out of reach.

The Rams finally scored a second touchdown the hard way, completing it with seven minutes remaining in the fourth period. It was a Hall-inspired drive, alternating passes to Hickey and Dante Magnani with the latter coming through on an occasional reverse.

The climax was reached on the 16-yard line when Hall hurriedly fired a low pass to Hickey, who was running full speed to the left-hand corner. He snatched it at his shoe-tops and staggered out of bounds, apparently stepping into the end zone just before leaving the field but the referee said no and the ball rested on the 1. Drake, a trifle weary and without his early drive, was twice thrown back at line thrusts. On what looked to be another Drake thrust, Hall took the ball instead and on a perfectly executed play cut back away around the right side for a touchdown. Adams converted.

Ram and Redskin strategy in the late stages was all in favor of the hosts. Hall was replaced by Gaylon Smith, a third-year man from Southwestern, and the latter's desperate passing came to a sudden end when Bob Tichenal intercepted one to insure a Redskin victory. Dick Farman, on the previous play, had smacked Smith for an 11-yard loss.

Titchenal was a fresh substitution for Ky Aldrich, who only a set of downs before had intercepted a Hall toss to stop cold a potential Cleveland touchdown march.

Navy-Penn Tickets Completely Sold; 73,391 Will Attend

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—A complete sellout of tickets for Saturday's football game with Navy at Franklin Field was announced tonight by H. Jamison Swarts, University of Pennsylvania director of athletics.

Swartz said tickets for 73,391 persons had been disposed of and there would be no public sale.

Fleming Wins Walk Race

Cincinnati, Oct. 26 (AP).—Walter Fleming, 31-year-old Detroit motor factory (Ford) employe, won the National amateur athletic union 30 kilometer walking race today, defeating a field of 20 in 2:52:03.

Pavich Holds 2-1 Margin In D. C. Scoring

Chris Pavish, Georgetown's slick and slender junior end, took a 2-1 margin of leadership over his nearest rival in the District college individual scoring race last weekend.

The 173-pound former all-Illinois State wingman grabbed a 13-yard pass from Benny Reiges in the Boston College game to score his fourth tally of the season and boost his point total to 24. Tied for second place at 12 points are four players: two from Maryland and one each from George Washington and American University.

They are Fullbacks Jack Wright and John Cordyack of Maryland, Fullback Walter Fedora of George Washington and End Paul Weidler of American.

Bulvin Is Third

Behind this quartet comes Georgetown's Benny Bulvin in third place with nine markers. Deadlocked for fourth spot each with one touchdown are Fullback Jack Mier, Halfback Mearle DuVall and End Bob James, all of Maryland; Fullback Joe Gyrogydeak, Halfback Jack Doolan and End Art Lemke, of Georgetown; Halfback Jim Graham and End Stan Ziobro of George Washington, and Halfbacks Russ Arnaud and Russ Atkisson of American University.

Merrill Hoover, sure-footed American U. guard, took over the top rung for conversions when he booted two for two as the Eagles lost to Allegheny, 20 to 14, to make his total four, as against three for Bulvin.

Two Newcomers

Only newcomers to this week's point columns are A. U.'s Atkisson and Mac Potter, the latter and end who helped his fellow flankmen continue their sparkling efforts to outscore the city's backs.

The ends-backs scoring controversy now stands at 10 touchdowns for the ends and 14 for the backs, but since there are twice as many backs in a line-up as ends, the flankmen still have a pronounced edge in this battle. In total points the backs lead, 84 points to 61, the ends' extra one being a conversion by Duke Alexander.

The team scoring race changed but little over the weekend. Cold statistics cast a most unpleasant light on District football. They show our four local teams have scored only 137 points in 19 games, while their opponents have amassed 306. Maryland is responsible for most of this discrepancy, having yielded 50 points to Duke and 55 to Penn.

D. C. College Elevens, All Beaten, Get Slight Respite

G. W. Is Only Team Facing Tough Foe

By Jack Munhall

The District's punch-drunk quartet of college football teams finally will get a respite this week, when only George Washington will be called upon to face an obviously superior rival.

Georgetown will take the weekend off to rest for its November 8 date with North Carolina State, while G. W.'s Colonials encounter a rebounding Clemson eleven Friday night at Griffith Stadium. On Saturday Maryland's much battered Terrapins travel to New Brunswick to play Rutgers while American University's Eagles will remain here to meet Randolph-Macon at Woodrow Wilson Stadium.

For Georgetown this off date which was to have been filled by a charity engagement with a service team for benefit of the USO will be more than welcome. The Hoyas returned from their bruising battle with Boston College's massive men none too robust. Ace Back Benny Bulvin's damaged ankle needs time to mend and sophomore Fullback Joe Gyorgydeak, who left the B. C. game early in the second half, can also benefit greatly by a breathing spell. Other Hoyas, too, will find a week's vacation from competition a happy time. Among them is All-America tackle candidate Al Blozis who now is 20 pounds under his 1940 playing weight of 250.

Terps in Trouble

Maryland which has been outscored 118 points to 18 in its last three games will be, in no position to improve its low football rating by playing a Rutgers team whose most recent effort resulted in a 49-7 defeat by Syracuse. But at least the tired Terps will be meeting a team considerably more in its class than were Duke and Penn.

American University was a disappointment again last Saturday, blowing a 14-0 lead and bowing to Allegheny, 20-14, but should have a good chance to pay Randolph-Macon, an old rival, back for many lickings of the past. This should be a good game between a pair of evenly matched opponents.

There is little to explain about last weekend's happenings in which the four local colleges, after two close escapes, finally succeeded in losing en masse.

Georgetown, in dropping a 14-6 decision to Boston College, played about as well as could be expected of a team that was without its ace back, Benny Bulvin, and which lost its only other consistent gainer of the day, Fullback Joe Gyorgydeak, early in the third period.

The Hoyas, whose attack never is potent, were a feeble lot without Bulvin, and proved once again that they haven't the punch to hope to win in big-time competition. And B. C. is big-time competition. Make no mistake on that. The Eagles have several good backs, a starting line averaging at least 210 pounds and a real all-America tackle in 220-pound Gil Bouley who just about wrecked Georgetown's offense all by himself. Georgetown justifiably is proud of its star tackle, Blozis, but Bouley several times made Blozis appear as a rank amateur. They played opposite each other.

No Excuse for G. W.

There is practically nothing to be said that hasn't already been said about George Washington's amazing collapse against William and Mary. Coach Bill Reinhart and his players honestly thought they had a good chance to win that one. Why the Colonials not only did not win but also suffered one of the worst defeats in its modern history is reflected clearly in the statistics.

Running George Washington gained only 48 yards to 206 for William and Mary. Passing, the Colonials completed only two of seven for 20 yards, and in addition had one intercepted and run back for a touchdown. The figures on G. W.'s ground gains were not impressive in themselves, but when you realize that on one running play Fullback Walter Fedora ran 47 yards, then you have the full picture of G. W.'s completely inept offense at other times. In other words, if the statistics were accurate, toss out Fedora's run and the Colonials would have netted one yard for their night's work.

Jenkins' 2042 Wins Campbell Sweepstakes

Smashing through with a brilliant 150 game in his last string, Lou Jenkins, Washington's No. 1 ranking bowler, staved off the threats of several local and Eastern topnotchers to win the sixteenth renewal of the Howard Campbell Classic last night with a total score of 2042.

He missed the all-time record for the event, held by Ed Blakeney, by only two sticks as he ran into difficulty in the last frame and counted only six. Perce Wolfe, of Hyattsville, rolled into second place with a total of 2016, and third money went to Billy Stalcup, of Rosslyn, with 1991. Others who placed were Ed Blakeney, the 1939 winner, who totaled 1986; Monk Walker, fifth, with 1978, and last place went to Lee Seim, of Baltimore, with 1965.

Jenkins' victory was worth $400 to him and it was a win he well deserved, as he has been knocking at the door in many tournaments so far this year, only to lose out in the closing moments.

Block prizes, worth $25 each went to Ollie Pacini with 171 and Tony Santini with 690 in the first round. Paul Fitzgerald had high set in the second with 702, with Lou Pohl, Baltimore high with a 168 game and Harry Hilliard with 722 and Angelo Pallidino of Hagerstown, Md. with 183 were tops for the final heat.

Howard Campbell, ranked No. 1 in the United States a decade ago and for whom the event is named, momentarily returned to his old form when he counted a fine 661 set in the second block, but found the pace too hot from that point on.

Henry Wrestles Boesch Thursday

Big Jim Henry, better known as The Green Hornet, and Paul Boesch, yesterday were rematched for a double windup role on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

The Hornet and Boesch grappled to a 30-minute draw last week, and the match was packed with such action that fans demanded a return bout.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

FORDHAM, 28; T. C. U., 14—Dear Stanford: Want to invite a true representative of the East to your Rose Bowl game, and get away from such ersatz Eastern foes as Nebraska? Hmm, I thought not. But remember, when and if you snub Fordham, you'll be evading just about the best there is. This is Crowley's best team. He has backs like Ben Babula sitting on the bench who'd be stars on other top-flight teams. Off Saturday's victory, the club might be a little sharper on pass defense, but it is hard to imagine a college club with more brute power or scoring punch. Don't say we didn't tell you, after you invite San Diego Teachers to represent the East.

CONSIDINE

MINNESOTA, 7; MICHIGAN, 0—Looks like Michigan lost Harmon and six points. Michigan's famed old "punt, pass, prayer" system boomeranged. Bruce Smith, who'll probably be chosen All-America on 95 per cent of the 418 official All America teams, put Michigan on the run by pouring himself into a 78-yard punt that went over Tom Kuzma's head like a triple to the flagpole. Presently he passed 43 yards to Herman Frickey to put the bladder in scoring position on the 5-yard line. Then he was hurt, and the ardent prayer of the Gophers, who have now won 13 straight over three seasons is that he can be patched up to last the rest of the season.

ARMY, 13; COLUMBIA, 0—Four straight for the identical Army team which at this time last year had been beaten 45-0 by Cornell, had lost two other games and had managed to beat Williams only, and then by one point. First time in years that the Cadets have come up to the Notre Dame game (next Saturday) unbeaten. Columbia might well have beaten Georgia last week, and presumably was as good Saturday. To have predicted at the start of the year that Army would be not only defeating but trouncing this kind of company, would have made an expert eligible for the nut house.

NAVY, 0; Harvard, 0—One of the biggest surprises in Naval circles since the monitor went into action. But this was no great blow to Navy. Its early season claim of great defensive merit still holds good. It has given up only two points this year. Dick Harlow had Harvard in a froth for this one, and it took a first-class team to hold the Harvards when twice they got close enough to reach out and score. Swede Larsen said after the game that if Peabody, the Harvard guard from Groton, no less, doesn't make All-America, there ain't no justice.

TEXAS, 40; RICE, 0—This must prove something very significant to addicts of comparative scores. Tulane, judged by many to be about as good as anything there is, lost to this game Rice. What does that make Texas? Anyway, Dana Bible's team with its limitless talent, has become the pride and despair of the profession. The runaway score probably was induced by a thirst for revenge. Rice won last year, 13-0, which means that Texas, in this case at least, has improved 53 points over last year.

NOTRE DAME, 49; ILLINOIS, 14—It's hard to believe, looking at that final score, that for a long time Saturday this appeared to be the annual upset which keeps Bob Zuppke in his job. Illinois led 7-0, and the score was Notre Dame, 21; Illinois, 14, in the fourth quarter, then Biff, Blooie, ! ! & ?) / zok, boom! See final score.

STANFORD, 13; WASHINGTON, 7—The coast league may be catching on to the T, but apparently Stanford is going to stay ahead of the pack in other departments. That remarkable southpaw, Frankie Albert, won this one because he doesn't play or think according to Hoyle. He bewildered Washington as much by ploughing 5 yards to a first down in his own territory, on fourth down, as did any piece of Clark Shaughnessy's magic.

TOUGALOO, 31; TALLADEGA, 7—Wal, bus' mah britches. The guys who dream up those weekly football ratings probably will use this to drop unbeaten Duke down another notch.

Eagles, with Tommy Thompson doing most of the tossing, completed 10 of 12 passes for 99 yards.

Dick Humbert ripped the pants off Goldberg in making a tackle in the first quarter and the Eagles took advantage of the hasty exit of the former Pitt star to start their first touchdown drive.

Taking over on their own 34, Castiglia, Fred Golden and Foster Watkins put together four running plays to the Cardinal 34 before a penalty and a 6-yard loss temporarily stalled the advance.

Barnum then booted out of bounds on the Cardinal 8 and John Martin's return punt carried only to his own 43. A pass to John Shonk and another to Bob Krieger made first down on the 14, before Thompson executed a perfect fake and sneaked through the line to the 4. Castiglia then crossed standing up on a wide end run and de Santis booted the extra point.

Four minutes later the Eagles had their second touchdown after a 57-yard advance. Most of the yardage on this drive came on Thompson's bullet-like aerials. He hurled five forwards to cover most of the ground, the last one to McAfee being good for 12 yards and the score. McAfee converted and it was 14-0 at the half.

Lyle Graham's interception of a Cardinal pass set up the Eagles' third score soon after the second half kickoff. Graham ran 22 yards to the Cards' 20, then Thompson hurled two passes to Humber that put the ball on the 3 from where Castiglia ran wide around end for his second six pointer. McAfee again converted.

The tide turned a few minutes later when McAfee's fumble was recovered by Frank Balazs on the Eagle 39. Clement lost 12, but passed to Lou Zontini for 21 yards. Balazs made it first down on the 25, then caught a pass on the 20. There Clement tossed a perfect toss to Dewell in the end zone. Zontini converted.

The Cards started their 72-yard march for their second score after Nick Basca punted to the Cards '28 late in the third period. With Frank Ivy snaring three of Clement's passes the Cards moved to the Eagle 24. Clement then got loose for a 15-yard run to the 9 and a six-yard plunge to the 3. Goldberg smashed to the 1 and then lunged over. Bill Daddio kicked the extra point to end scoring for the afternoon.

Deyoe Is Victor In Skeet Opening

U The brand new Potomac Skeet and Trapshooting Club was opened yesterday near Hyattsville with a veteran shooting star sweeping the field.

George Deyoe, police officer, took the high over-all with 185x200. His 99 hits was best in the 12-gauge event, in the 20-gauge affair he scored 48 and in the 410-gauge his record was 38.

Gene Sarazen, Heafner Win; Spencer Quits

Gene Sarazen made another of his popular Washington appearances yesterday in an exhibition match at East Potomac and fashioned a two-under-par 70 over the windy layout to pair with Clayton Heafner in a 2-and-1 triumph over Cliff Spencer and Mel Shorey.

Spencer, the host professional, announced his resignation at East Potomac following the match. The long hitter who led the Nation's National Open qualifiers this year said it was effective immediately.

Spencer is concluding his second year as teaching professional at the public course. He will immediately take over a position in the Government.

Sarazen, pounding the ball like a champion and accurate as ever around the greens, was the individual star of the match although Heafner, the big North Carolinian and a second-year star in the pro ranks, was just one shot back with a 71.

Shorey, former pro at the host club and now at Indian Spring, was even par with a 72, while Spencer was back with a 76 as he was unquestionably playing under a mental strain.

KENWOOD

J. C. Dale scored a hole-in-one on the seventeenth at Kenwood yesterday, using a five-iron for the perfect shot on the 170-yard par three. C. Henry Cohen, Bill Wenzel and Scott Rigby were his playing partners.

Dale and Cohen had previously advanced to the finals of the first flight in the club two-man team championship, winning on the eighteenth over William Briggs and Ralph Benner. They will meet George Vass and Frank Schrider in next week's finals as the latter team won over V. G. Myers and Dr. J. W. Nesbitt, 4 and 3.

In the second flight of the two-man tourney C. L. Vaile and S. E. Carpenter defeated T. F. Alverson and A. H. Youngquist, 2 and 1, and will meet the winner of the R. A. Weaver-L. N. Shade vs. William Burch-C. A. Miller encounter. The tandem of William Cannon and E. Blackham won over Richard Nash and Richard Chamberlain, 1 up, and will meet the winner of the H. D. Barber-H. T. Morse vs. Dr. L. B. Gaffney-Dr. H. P. Parker match in the third bracket.

BANNOCKBURN

Billy Houghton and William Pendergast accounted for gross honors in the scotch foursome play at Bannockburn with an alternate shot 69, one under par. Two teams tied for net, Ancel Cleary and Frank Hanrahan, 84-22, 62, and John Mossberg-E. L. Crill, 77-15, 62.

CONGRESSIONAL

Miss Hardwick And Wyatt Net Winners

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 26.—Three British tennis stars, former Davis Cup and Wightman Cup players, teamed with two midshipmen today at the Naval Academy in a series of exhibition matches before a capacity crowd of 1,500.

Mary Hardwick defeated Mrs. Dorothy Round Little, 6—4, 6—4, in the opening exhibition which proved to be the feature match of the day. Miss Hardwick's speed was too much for her former Wightman Cup teammate, although Mrs. Round displayed a powerful forehand and backhand.

In the men's singles, Midshipman Elston Wyatt defeated Charles Hare, ranked No. 1 British amateur, 8-6. Midshipman Joe Hunt teamed with Mrs. Little to defeat Miss Hardwick and Hare, 6—4, 6—2, in the mixed doubles.

Art Hendrick, Navy tennis coach, said it was the first time professional women tennis players ever had appeared on the academy courts.

The matches were played in brisk, chill weather. The British players are playing a series of exhibition matches at a number of Southern universities.

Lawrence Coach Injured After Team Wins

Big Rapids, Mich., Oct. 26 (AP).—Lawrence Tech of Detroit beat Ferris Institute 19 to 6 in a football game last night and the only person injured was 280-pound Coach Don Ridler of Tech.

Ridler fell in a gulley near the field house after the game and five stitches were required to close a cut in his hand. He was treated at a hospital.

Dogs . . .

By George Berner

BERNER

Well, the big show is over and the officers and members of the National Capital Kennel Club are to be congratulated. It was a swell show, and many local owners, showing for the first time, had the time of their lives. If you didn't show your dog you missed something, and if you didn't go, you missed more. We were there, got beat and had a fine time doing it.

Q. Following the constant advice in your column to take sick dogs to veterinarians, I took my scottie to Dr. —— last week, and the next day he died. You can't tell me these vets know what they're doing. He had been sick four weeks and was getting better until I took him to the vet.

A. Obviously you're the type of fellow that can't be told anything. We have warned dog owners constantly through this column to take their dogs to vets instead of doctoring them at home, but we also cautioned to get the dog to the doctor early or not later than 48 hours after he had become ill. Why in the world you waited four weeks before taking your scottie to a doctor only you will ever know, but the delay probably killed him.

Q. Is it advisable to breed a bitch every time she comes in season? A friend tells me to do it, as he says I can only breed her for about six years and I should get as many puppies as possible.

A. If you don't care what quality puppies you have or what happens to the bitch, you may breed her twice a year, but if you want good puppies and value the bitch at all, you will breed her not more than once each year.

Q. I have a dog that seems to crave fats. She is quite thin and will eat anything with fat on it. In fact, she will eat and apparently relish just plain fat or suet. A friend who used to raise dogs says her system needs it and to feed it to her. He says that when her system has had enough she will stop eating fats. Is this correct and shall I fed her fats and suet?

A. Your friend is absolutely correct. Your dog is apparently run down, and with cold weather coming up she does need fats. Feed her fat meat and some suet. Balance this, though, with one of the better dry dog foods.

Q. I have a litter of spitz puppies and would like to register them. How do I go about it?

A. Sorry, but you just don't. The American Kennel Club has not as yet recognized the spitz as a pure-bred of dog, so they cannot be registered.

Q. A friend of mine who knows you tells me that you very seldom lose a puppy. I would like to know the secret.

A. Sorry, but there isn't any secret. Keep the bitch, and subsequently the puppies, free of worms. Have them inoculated against distemper as soon as your vet thinks advisable, and wean them on scraped beef and milk. Beef, milk and a good dry dog food in about equal parts from then on, and barring accidents, you should raise your puppies.

Q. What book would you advise the novice dog owner to buy? I want to breed dogs and want a book that will help me.

A. Get Will Judy's "Dog Encyclopedia" and follow what you find there. You need no other book or books. The encyclopedia is as complete as any volume ever written on any subject.

Q. How often should a dog be wormed?

A. That's exactly like asking how often you should take morphine or aspirin. A dog should be wormed when he needs it, and your vet must decide that. Be suspicious, though, if his coat gets dull and shabby and he appears unthrifty generally. Remember, though, that probably four out of five dogs which are wormed at home don't need it and that worming has killed more dogs than the worms.

Allegheny Beats A. U.; Students Get Holiday

Meadville, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—Dr. William P. Tolley, president of Allegheny College, declared a half holiday for students tomorrow to commemorate the institution's first football victory in three years.

Pirates Bow, 38-7

Pimlico Special Thursday Likely to Draw Five Starters

Brann Seeks 3d Victory With Pictor

Showing Saturday Ousts Big Pebble; Haltal Returns to Track He Loves

Three more days of racing at Laurel and then the turf spotlight will be turned on Pimlico Thursday, where Brother Alfred G. Vanderbilt and his boys stage the fifth running of the Pimlico Special. As the result of happenings last Saturday, it looks as though the Special lost a starter in the Circle M Ranch Stable's Big Pebble, just as it gained one in W. L. Brann's Pictor. Big Pebble failed to "run a lick," as they say around the barns, in the Washington Handicap. He was sore in his front legs and there seems little liklihood of his being patched up by Thursday.

The appearance of the Brann colors through Pictor are a welcome addition to the Special, however. Challedon won the race twice for Brann and, off his performance last Saturday, Pictor has a good chance of making it three for the Maryland stable. Opposing Pictor, probably will be War Relic, Market Wise, Penelon and Haltal.

The Maryland Jockey Club deserved a better field. However, Whirlaway had too much of the grind and was thus eliminated and no one holds anything against Mrs. Al Sabath for declining the invitation to the 2-year-old champion, Alsab. Either or both of these horses could have boosted the Special stock. However, it still looks like a horse race.

Haltal Returns

Haltal will come back to the scene of his greatest triumph. He will return to old Pimlico, where, last May, he startled the turf world by winning the Dixie Handicap, oldest and richest race of its kind offered in the State of Maryland. He comes back, by virtue of that victory.

Haltal is a bay colt by The Porter out of False Modesty, she by Whisk Broom II. He was foaled in 1937 at the Woodvale Farm, Paris, Ky. This farm is owned by Royce Martin, in whose colors Haltal has always raced. Martin is a resident of the State of Ohio, whose business is the manufacture of automobile and aviation accessories.

Martin has been in the racing game a long time, but not until 1940 and 1941 did he really come up with a top-flight horse. Last year Our Boots, four times conqueror of Whirlaway, placed the Woodvale stable right in the front rank. This year, when knee trouble kept Our Boots from many of his engagements, Haltal took over. Nor did he do a bad job of "taking over."

Won Big Money

Haltal has won $51,515 this year. His greatest victory was, as previously stated, here at Pimlico in the historic Dixie. In that race he beat the Western champion, Mioland, in a photo finish. The latter had just come East fresh from five stakes victories.

Racing in Florida in the winter, Haltal won the second division of the $10,000 added McLennan Memorial, scoring over some good ones. Prior to that he had been a non-winner at two and three.

At Churchill Downs Haltal further proved his ability by conquering Viscounty, Gallahadion and Up the Creek in a stakes. At Belmont Park he ran fourth in the Suburban behind Your Chance, and fifth in the Metropolitan, won by Eight Thirty. Then, for a short time, he faded from the racing picture, only to return in August at Saratoga and win the thirty-ninth running of the Saratoga Handicap, leaving Big Pebble, Corydon and Fenelon in his wake.

This was the third major upset which the Martin color-bearer had registered during the year. It clearly proved that, finding a track to his liking, and being really "at himself," he was a handicap contender who must always be reckoned with.

Likes the Track

Haltal likes the Pimlico racing strip. He may well prove dangerous here in the Special. The Martins had hoped that Our Boots might be the one to carry their silks in this great classic, but they surely have a good—perhaps better than good—substitute in Haltal.

Haltal is not a big horse, standing in the neighborhood of 15 hands 2 inches, but he is powerfully made. He does not seem to care too much for high weight, though he won the Saratoga under 113 pounds. He has been campaigned rather lightly during his three years on the courses, having started but 20 times in all, six of which he has won, with four second and four thirds, for a total of $51,640.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

I got a pretty good laugh coming home from Laurel last Saturday. A sports announcer on a Middle West station was telling about a plot to wipe out the Laurel track. He said that first there was a "ringer case," second there was the horsemen's strike and third a man was caught with a portable radio set sending out results. He said that if something wasn't done quickly that Laurel would have to lock its gates. I listened to this "close up the joint" stuff just 15 minutes after the mutuel department gave out a figure of $660,000 (plus) for the Saturday betting and this is the best day's business done at Laurel since 1929. Lest we forget, I hope the horse "nerving" investigation hasn't been dropped. Come on, let us hear something on the subject. Jockey Nick Wall was ill Saturday and unable to come down from New York so it was reported. Jockey Arthur Craig has packed his tack and departed for California. Tough break for Russ Hodges, the Redskin game announcer, who was injured in an auto crash last week. He was scheduled to take over the sports program for WOL today. Let's hope he gets up here real soon. In the meanwhile, Ted Dunlap will continue to do a good job in the afternoon on the race results. It is a pleasure to see the veteran George Woolf ride horses. For the last couple of years Woolf has been confining his riding to big shot stake horses. However, at Laurel he has been taking all kinds of work and he really is doing a saddle full of horse booting. His ride on Pictor Saturday was a beaut. Now don't let's forget. There are three more days of racing here, and then we go to Pimlico on Thursday to see the Pimlico Special. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—CLIATH is a doubtful starter, but ran well before being shipped here from New York. CUTH has been threatening and is dangerous. WAR ART and DARTING STAR are possibilities.

Second race—SMUG may take the measure of these maiden 2-year-olds. Showed early speed in debut last week against much better ones. GAY CALL deserves attention in this company. CHASSIS for the minor money.

Third race—GOOD CONDUCT appears ready to run a bang-up race here. Needs only the right handling. KATE SMITH has speed and will be a keen factor. CRIMSON LANCER and ACCIDENTAL have longshot chances.

Fourth race—BILLS RITA was a second last week and had some trouble. Looks like the right spot. PRETTY LADY is a fair one and will be in the money circle. BALLYARNETT for the show end.

Fifth race—JACSTEAL made his usual charge last out but a bit too late to be effective. I look for a better timed ride today. WAR KEY is dangerous. GEORGE LAMAZE downed cheaper ones.

Sixth race—SON ALTESSE appears to have found the right company in this event. I'm going to string along. TROIS PISTOLES has speed and is a threat. DOLLAR BAY is on edge and should get in the cash circle.

Seventh race—DUSKY FOX drops down to meet these and seem capable of account for the major portion of the purse. REGENT will close ground. CHEER ME has won two and may be better than generally rated.

Eighth race—JANEGRI needs only to run back to that last to defeat these cheap ones. TRIPHAMMER and BALLATANT to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—SON ALTESSE.

Schoolboy Notes:

St. Albans Star Tops School Point Making

Personally attending to more than half of St. Alban's scoring as it trounced Baltimore Friends last Friday, Bob Bondy, the Saints' driving fullback, romped into the point lead among District schoolboys.

Bondy rushed over two touchdowns and added an extra point to bring his total to 91 points in four games.

Though he has sat out Central's last two contests with a smashed collar bone, big Jim Kurz was still right up there with 5 touchdowns in the Vikings' first two games. His mark was tied by Devitt's George McGowan, who went scoreless as Prep was throttled by Gonzaga Saturday.

Deadlocked for the next position were Washington-Lee's brilliant pair of ball-carriers, Jim Sprinkle and Eddie DeCelle. Each has four 6-pointers to his credit, and in addition Sprinkle has passed to two more scores.

Tops in the passing-to-touchdown department, however, is still Elmer Raba of Gonzaga, whose bullet-straight heaves have connected seven times Jack Samperton's six conversions for Central remained best in that department, too.

SCHOOLBOY NOTES—Announcement that a Richmond All-Star team will face the All Metropolitan eleven in the Tobacco Bowl there suits this end perfectly . . . The Virginia boys thus will labor under the same difficulty as the D. C. contingent—lack of complete organization which teams acquire only after a full season's play together . . . The All Metro club, however, will get a full week's drills together before setting out for the first "bowl" game ever played by a local schoolboy team . . . Coach of the Washington team will be obtained in the next two weeks.

That change of dates from Sunday November 30 to the twenty-ninth may necessitate the permission of various local school heads so their boys can leave at noon on Friday . . . A two-day trip is still planned, however.

This week's scholastic schedule calls for two "big" games—Western at Eastern on Friday, and Tech at Central on Saturday . . . The first promises real competition, but not the latter . . . Central's untarnished record should remain just that against a team which has won only one game so far . . . Other Friday games send Coolidge to Anacostia, St. John's to Roosevelt, Georgetown Prep to Wilson, Fredericksburg High to Washington-Lee, and Lawrence (Va.) High to George Washington.

The Indianapolis Capitols will oppose the Amerks Thursday at Washington in the season's opener.

Jay Turner Begins Drills For De Chard

By Tony Neri

Jimmy DeChard, the District's outstanding heavyweight prospect and the pride of Northeast Washington, is at the crossroads of his pugilistic career as he prepares for his eight-round match against Jay D. Turner next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

The handsome local boy, winner of his four professional fights, meets in Turner a rugged and seasoned campaigner. Turner, who hails from Dallas, Texas, appeared here in a preliminary on the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer card last May at Griffith Stadium.

The Texan arrived yesterday afternoon and will begin daily drills at the Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest. Today's session is scheduled for 2 o'clock. Turner will be handled in training by Ben (Evil Eye) Finkle until the arrival of Willie Ketchum, Turner's regular trainer.

DeChard will get in his practice licks at Manager Frankie Mann's gym. Harry Groves, former local fighter, is handling DeChard's training program.

First Since Carilli

This will be DeChard's first fight since scoring a decision over Joe Carilli at the ball park last summer. He has been on the shelf with an injured hand, hurt in the Carilli bout, but Manager Mann says the mitt has healed and Jimmy is in top shape again.

Upon reaching our fair city, Turner hied himself off to see the Redskins beat the Rams. He is a close friend of Slingin' Sammy Baugh and the pair renewed old acquaintances. It seems Turner, performing for John Tarleton College, played against Baugh when the latter was at Texas Christian University.

Turner will hold a 23-pound pull in weights over DeChard. The Texan, who stands 6 feet 3, weighs 215, while DeChard weighs 192. Jimmy is 6 feet 2½ inches tall.

May Be Drafted

The local boy is subject to call in the selective service draft, having already been placed in Class 1-A. His manager hopes, if Jimmy is called, that he will be stationed at a nearby camp, such as Fort Meade or Camp Belvoir, so Jimmy will be able to fight in Washington.

Mann announced that DeChard has been invited to fight in Frank Barbaro's white hope tournament in Detroit, but it is doubtful if the invitation will be accepted. Mann plans to give Jimmy plenty work this winter. He isn't holding Turner too lightly, knowing that DeChard is facing his hardest battle since turning pro last year.

Turner will probably enter the ring the betting favorite. The boys along Post Square are quoting the Texan an 8 to 5 choice. Turner holds victories over Babe Ritchie and Joe O'Gatty. DeChard's victory over Carilli here stamped him a promising prospect. In that fight, after being behind for the first three rounds, DeChard came on to win the duke by taking the last five rounds of the 8-round fight.

Potomac Boxers To Hold Show

The Potomac Boxer Club will hold its second annual sanction match next Sunday in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill's residence at 2535 Belmont Road Northwest.

Also on the card are exhibitions of obedience-trained boxers and outstanding champions of the East. For further information call Shepherd 4901-M or Falls Church 1402.

84 Civic Units Here Work for Hitler's Defeat

Aiming to unite Negro citizens behind the President's program for defeat of Hitler, and at the same time to defeat the spread of Hitlerism in America, an "action conference" of representatives of 84 civic, fraternal and religious organizations was held yesterday at Columbia Lodge Auditorium.

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, of the National Youth Administration, who offered the slogan "all out or all over," described Hitlerism as a threat to all the Negro hopes for in America.

Describing the Hitler policy to divide and conquer, she cited schism developed among Flemings and Walloons, Czechs and Slovaks, Slavs and Croats, and called on Negro citizens to close ranks with all American agencies, which, she said, "must lift them up or all America must come down."

Letters Sent to President

Volunteers in civilian defense activities were enrolled, following an exposition of the civilian defense setup by T. J. Anderson, who indicated that the entire local organization would be combined and coordinated with civilian defense activities under Mayor LaGuardia, within a few weeks.

Opposition to fascism was voiced in a letter forwarded to President Roosevelt, which called for every "possible aid to every nation which is fighting Hitlerism," and advocated "every step necessary to destroy this menace to national and international morality."

That total resources of our Nation be thrown immediately into action against Hitler was the theme of a program adopted by the conference. Indorsement was given to all-out aid to Britain, the Soviet Union and China, and aid was asked for Ethiopia. Appeasement of Japan was denounced. Repeal of the Neutrality Act was called for.

"Prepared and Willing"

Dr. William H. Jernagin, who presided, said:

"My eyes cannot be closed to the errors of our Government when we have such a great number of men and women who are prepared and willing to be intergrated into every branch of this defense program. Yet, even in the midst of a crisis, their support is refused because they belong to a particular race."

Other speakers included Porter L. Lumpkins, of the committee on human resources and skill of the Civil Defense Program; Mrs. Richard W. Gant, of the Central Volunteer Unit, coordinating and organizing volunteer service in civilian defense; Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education; Judge William C. Hueston and Miss Thelma Dale.

Dollar-a-Year Men May Be Quizzed On Connections

Top dollar-a-year men in the national defense setup may be called before the special Senate Committee investigating contracts under the national defense program to be questioned on whether they have severed all their ties with private business.

Chairman Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, disclosed last night the committee is considering taking up such a program within 10 days or two weeks, after disposing of other pending hearings.

Who will be called has not been discussed, Truman said.

The committee today will hear Floyd Odlum, in charge of spreading defense contracts among small business concerns, on effects of priorities on business throughout the country.

Tomorrow it will end its hearings on the refusal of Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director, to approve a $1,500,000 defense housing contract for the P. J. Currier Lumber Co., of Detroit, though the Currier bid was $216,000 below that of the next lowest bidder.

Barkley Scores Attempts to Stir Racial Antagonism

Milwaukee, Oct. 26 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, declared tonight that attempts to stir racial antagonisms "strike at the heart of true Americanism."

He spoke at a dinner commemorating the fortieth anniversary of the Jewish National Fund, an agency which raises money to support the Jewish program in Palestine.

"No more contemptuous disregard of all the principles of Americanism can be indulged in," Barkley said, "than that effort which prompts any man claiming to be an American to seek to arouse one portion of his fellowmen against another portion because of race, religion or color."

Lauding Jewish attainments, he said that "from Moses to Brandeis, the Jewish people have been sort of a gulf stream through the ocean of humanity, warming every shore it touched."

D. C. Girl, 13, Trims Veterans With Army Rifle

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—A 13-year-old Washington, (D. C.) girl, without previous experience on military rifles, took top honors today from a group of seasoned veterans in the largest .30-caliber rifle match of any kind ever held in the State of Virginia.

The sharp-shooting lass was Miss Audrey Richard, of 4027 Thirteenth Street Northwest, Washington, who has had only 2 years of experience with .22-caliber rifles, but has won numerous medals in competition with some of the Nation's best marksmen.

The young girl captured 5 awards in the high-powered rifle tournament, open to all comers with any kind of rifle, held today at the United States Marine Corps Rifle Range at Quantico.

Alexandria to Try Skip-Stop Plan On King Street

Buses traveling along King Street in the downtown business section of Alexandria will be permitted to stop only at every other intersection to pick up and discharge passengers, under a new plan to be placed in effect within the next ten days by the city traffic board, as a means of alleviating traffic congestion along the city's main business thoroughfare.

Capt. Edgar Sims, chief of the police department and a member of the board, said stops for east and west-bound vehicles will be alternated at every other block, so as to provide for only one stop at each intersection. A schedule of stops for all buses is now being prepared by the police department, and the plan will be placed into effect as soon as city employes can remove signs which designate bus stops at each corner on both sides of King Street.

The new system will be operated on a trial basis for a period of 30 days, and if it proves to be of any assistance in relieving congestion it will be retained permanently, Capt. Sims said.

Four Small Boys Play With 50 Dynamite Sticks

They may not have realized it, but four small boys were lucky yesterday that they didn't get blown to kingdom come.

They had been playing with dynamite—50 sticks of it—in their Tom Sawyer-like caves in the woods near Dalecarlia Reservoir.

The high explosive, stolen from the Dalecarlia hydroplant, was recovered by police after an aqueduct guard spotted a youngster walking by with a stick of dynamite in his pocket.

The boy said he found it in a cave, but on cross examination by Policeman B. T. Chapman, of the Seventh Precinct, admitted he and three others, all 7 to 11 years old, had stolen 50 sticks from a construction project at the hydroplant.

The other three were taken into custody, then all were released to their parents pending a decision on what action is to be taken against them.

Waitress Killed, 7 Hurt as Fire Razes Night Club

Erie, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—A 20-year-old waitress burned to death and seven persons were injured in a $65,000 fire which destroyed the Hofbrau, a night club at Waldemeer Amusement Park on Lake Erie today.

The victim was tentatively identified as Nancy Ann Britain, of Erie, one of several waitresses and busboys who rushed into the burning building from a nearby dance hall to save their coats and purses.

They were among 126 hired to serve a meal to 1500 employes of the Hammerill Paper Co. holding a social gathering in the dance hall. The guests were not endangered by the fire. Food for the affair was being prepared in the Hofbrau. The injured were employes who ran back into the club and a fireman who suffered a possible broken back when debris fell on him.

Isles Do Not Fear Japan, Grady Says

By the United Press

Former Assistant Secretary of State Henry F. Grady returned last night from a special 4000-mile trip through the Far East where he studied conditions in China, India, the Philippines and the East Indies for the United States Governments.

He told the United Press that there is little fear of Japan either in the Indies, the Philippines or in British Malaya and indicated that the Far East's democratic nations are confident they can meet any dangers which may arise.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams will be the principal speakers today at the morning session of the national advisory committee of the National Youth Administration, which opens a three-day conference in the Mayflower Hotel.

Virginia Home Defense Force Shows Paces

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Winchester, Va., Oct. 26.—The Eleventh Battalion of the Virginia Protective Force passed in review across the Handley High School football field today and brought an estimated 3000 spectators to their feet because these home guards looked good.

A few were gray haired, some had prominent waistlines, many seemed to be veterans of the World War and some looked very young, but they all kept line, marched briskly and flashed a contagiously high spirit.

From Alexandria, Warrenton, Berryville and Winchester they paraded pretty fancily on a piece of ground where Stonewall Jackson had their fathers or grandfathers pitched camp 75 years ago. They've been acting on spirit and nothing else, taking the place of the Virginia National Guard, now in the regular service. They are not paid and the 47 cities and towns they're mobilized in hold dances and parties to raise money to keep them going.

Their blue-gray uniforms are made by convicts in the Virginia Penitentiary and their period of enlistment is three years. They can't get out for the asking when they're in and they have to stand discipline. They're lawyers, small businessmen, delivery boys; the poor and the well-to-do. Their officers think they're swell.

Adj. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, representing the Governor at the review today, said, "They're wonderful material." Several more companies, he said, probably would be added to the force. There are now 3500 men and officers, commanded by Brig. Gen. E. E. Goodwyn, of Emporia.

The show these home guardsmen gave today for the home folk and their commanders to see was brief. The four companies arrived at the Handley Stadium shortly before 3 p. m. and were off the field an hour later. They went by the reviewing officers three times, showed off some bayonet work and took to their cars, to be back at their stores, offices or manual work tomorrow. A stream of automobiles, loaded with children, aunts, uncles, cousins and admirers followed them home along the mountain roads.

A Cross-Section

While they were leaving somebody in the packed spectator stands said loudly enough for everybody to hear: "Yonder's Colonel Wild Bill Donovan's son, David, from down at Berryville. He's a sergeant." The Adjutant General said, "We've got five former Virginia commanders of the American Legion in this outfit." The cross-section was obvious; in the cars they drove, if in nothing else. The V. P. F. is a people's army.

The privates walk up and talk to the majors, respectfully, of course, but when they dern well feel like it. They're all pretty pleasant to each other. But when orders come it's like any other army; there's obedience and no grinning or bellyaching. Someone pointed out that the V. P. F. men were told that they were organized to defend their homes, if it comes to that. There was no vague talk about the purpose, so everybody takes his duty seriously, it was said.

They marched around today behind the Handley High School Band and before the reviewing officers standing between the American Flag and the flag of Winchester, England, which this city uses, too. Reviewing were the Battalion Major, Lieut. Col. Frank M. Wray of Berryville; Brig. Gen. Goodwyn; Adjutant Gen. Waller; Mayor Charles R. Anderson of Winchester; Maj. Everett A. Hellmuth of Alexandria, and Lieut. Charles Houston, Richmond newspaperman who got enthusiastic over Virginia's army during all the talk about it around the State's capitol and joined up.

4 Killed, 15 Hurt As Tornado Rips Arkansas Towns

Russellville, Ark., Oct. 26 (AP).—Four women were killed and at least 15 other persons injured by a tornado that swept through Dardanelle and rural sections of Yell and Pope Counties south of Russellville late today.

The twister cut a swath 100 yards wide as it struck first at Chicalah, then drove through a residential section of Dardanelle, smashing three white homes and more than half a dozen houses of Negroes.

Crossing the Arkansas river, the storm hit Bethel and Oak-E-Doak before losing itself in the valley farm lands. Telephonic communication was cut off tonight and efforts to make a thorough survey of property damage were unsuccessful. Aid was rushed by State and military officials.

Woman Preacher From Britain Overdue in U. S.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26 (INS).—Dr. A. Maude Royden, prominent British woman who was to have preached in the First Methodist Church at Germantown, Pa., last night, has not been heard from since she sailed for the United States in a convoy more than three weeks ago.

This was disclosed by Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, foreign secretary of the Churches of Christ in America, who took the English preacher's place in the pulpit at St. Stephen's Church today.

Dr. Royden was the first woman in Great Britain to become pastor of a church and to be given a doctor of divinity degree. She began her public career as a suffragette and from 1917 to 1920 was assistant pastor of London's City temple, which has been destroyed by bombs.

Brooklyn Drydock Strike Voted

By the United Press

New York, Oct. 26.—A strike of 6000 men tomorrow morning at the Brooklyn plant of the Robins Drydock & Repair Co., which has a contract to repair all damaged British merchant ships entering New York Harbor in addition to handling other defense work, was voted tonight by members of Local 39, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.).

About 3000 members of the local attended the meeting tonight at which the walkout was approved for 7 a. m. tomorrow. The strike will be on when the night shift leaves the plant. The dispute hinges on wage demands.

The strike originally was voted at a meeting of the local last Thursday night and was scheduled to begin the next day. However, John Green, international president of the union, wired the local leaders to withhold action until he could discuss the matter with them. Green addressed tonight's meeting.

Plans call for picketing of the plant to begin at 7 a. m. tomorrow.

Green said that the union will supply all necessary help to maintain plant property, including fire guards.

Union officials said that the Robins yards now are engaged solely in repair work. Last Thursday, they said, approximately 15 ships were being repaired, including three British merchantmen and the Egyptian liner Kawsar, recently arrived from Suez.

Briggs Workers Called On to End Wildcat Strikes

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers—C. I. O., gave union employes of the Briggs manufacturing company a verbal tongue-lashing today and called for an end to wildcat strikes in the Briggs plant.

Thomas, who said a series of unauthorized walkouts had disrupted operations at the Briggs plant, recently, urged the membership to adhere closely to grievance procedure set up in the contract and to eliminate union politics from the local.

After Thomas' talk the members proceeded to amend the by-laws preparatory to a new election of officers which will enable the local to regain its autonomy and dissolve the administration of Melvin Bishop, international executive board member which was set up two months ago to manage the local.

Hitler, Ciano Discuss Plan to Farm Ukraine

Rome, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Italy's plan to send thousands of occupation troops and thousands of farmers to Russia was discussed at Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's conference with Adolf Hitler on the Eastern Front Saturday, reliable sources said today.

It was understood that Germany already is organizing large groups of South German farmers to go to Russia, particularly the rich Ukraine, and that Ciano's present conferences are to establish how many farmers Italy can send. The German and Italian farmers will work with and supervise the Ukrainian peasants, informants said.

Reports of the destruction of the Ukraine by retreating Soviet forces are believed here to be exaggerated, but it is generally conceded that the Ukraine will not be able to supply any grain to the Axis nations this year. Grain that escaped sabotage will be consumed by the Axis armies and the Ukrainian population this winter, informants said, but they predicted that the Ukraine would solve Europe's food problems next year.

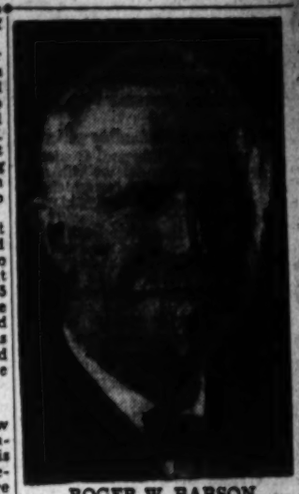
A Post-War Plan

By Roger W. Babson

Second-Hand Goods for Export

A recent column, in which I discussed what would happen to business after World War II, has brought to me several suggestions. Among these is one from E. H. Pearson, of Autaugaville, Ala., which I desire to pass on to readers. Strange to say, a letter along the same lines came to me a while ago from a group of economist in Holland.



ROGER W. BABSON

The immediate need after the war will be for markets for peacetime goods. These must be manufactured in great quantities in order to keep employed the millions now engaged in the manufacture of munitions. Furthermore, we are to have a great demand for machinery, building materials and merchandise from abroad by people who have no money with which to pay.

We, therefore, must work out some way to consume the finished goods which we are then able to produce apart from the wearing-out process and a World War every 25 years. A trade-in plan such as the automobile people have developed but made applicable to all industries has possibilities. Consumers need be trained to replace goods before they wear out.

We are advised to look for new uses and new products for raw materials and finished goods. This means new markets must be secured. Manufacturers today are using fully depreciated tools and machinery which they should trade in for new machinery so as to give the American people better goods for less money. Prosperity comes only from lower taxes and lower prices. Continuous employment is far more important than increases in wages or unit profits.

We need some way to make it possible for the worker and those having private funds to consume the new finished goods that will be available a few years hence. Those who have funds to buy with are usually thrifty people. Being thrifty, they wear out the goods they own unless they are offered a value for such goods. Cannot the trade-in system which has been used in creating the automobile, refrigerator and stove markets be applied to 100 industries?

After this war is over our neighbor nations in war-torn Europe and Asia are going to look to us for food, clothes and other products. One good crop year in Europe will in a large measure greatly help solve the food problem. Their lack of raw materials, however, will make it difficult to make machines, clothing, bedding and many other things for years to come. We will have to help these pepole in one of two ways:

(1) With our warehouses full to overflowing with raw cotton and other products and our manufacturing setup geared to convert these into finished goods, we can continue to tax our overtaxed people by buying such new finished goods from our manufacturers and shipping them to needy nations; or (2) we can now organize trade-in centers, selling our new goods to our own people and shipping the used goods abroad. I earnestly urge the latter policy.

We could have trade-in setups in all trade centers of our nation without any more Government employes. We have plenty of Federal setups now functioning which can be used for this purpose. To these centers our consuming public could carry their used goods and, after having such goods appraised, receive a trade-in certificate from the Federal appraiser. This certificate, if used in ten days, would be good as cash in the purchase of new machinery and goods costing three times the face value of the certificate. The used machines and goods would be for export. In fact, no new products should be allowed to leave the country except as paid for by cash.

We will have accomplished the following: Remove from the channels of domestic trade enough used goods so that our consumers are able to replace such used goods with new merchandise. Two-thirds of the cost would be paid for by the one benefiting most. As the consumer buys from the retailer, the retailer from the jobber and the jobber fom the manufacturer, we will have three direct ways for meeting this cost from those who will receive this new business. Such a cost collected from a business transaction resulting in profit is the easiest money to collect, especially if such money is used solely for producing new business for the firm paying the same.

We formerly depended on the generosity of relatives and our immediate communities to care for the needy of our nation who were unable to care for themselves. This may yet be the most satisfactory method of handling the problem. We now, however, tax our people to secure the funds necessary for this purpose. Very often relief is made too attractive and our overtaxed public is needlessly imposed upon.

It is our duty to care for the unfortunate people of our community; but aside from making them comfortable it is not our duty to make such relief attractive. If a trade-in setup were operating in a community there would be an oversupply of used goods which could be made sanitary and given to those needing the same. Such goods would make these pepole comfortable, yet such relief would not undermine the character of our people as does the present system.

The trade-in idea is simple. Our Federal Government would have a way for producing increased consumption of finished goods as the need arose simply by increasing the allowance for such used goods offered for trade-in. Then, in inflationary times when our Government wishes to discourage trade, it could lower or remove altogether the trade allowances. This would provide employers, wage workers and investors a much-needed automatic regulator. Why wait until the war is over before trying out such a system?

Duce Renews Pledge to See War Through

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 26.—Premier Mussolini reasserted today a determination to fight at Germany's side to final victory.

Standing on the balcony of a government building at Littoria, in the reclaimed Pontine Marsh region, just outside Rome, his hand resting on a primitive plow handle, Il Duce told the assembled peasants in a brief address:

"With the same inflexible will with which we gained this goal (reclaiming of the marshlands) we will also reach the supreme one for which we have fought, are fighting and will fight until victory.

In the crowds which heard him were 3000 war veterans who worked on reclamation projects and to whom farms were allotted in the Pontine region, now a well cultivated agricultural area.

Shouts of "Yes, Duce!" greeted Mussolini's brief remarks, principally dedicated to praise of the Pontine Marsh reclamation as "indiputable proof our high creative and organizing capacity."

Today's high command war bulletin reported Italian torpedo-launching planes which attacked British naval units in the central and eastern Mediterranean Saturday evening had hit a cruiser with a torpedo.

(In Berlin, the official news agency D. N. B., reported German dive-bombers sank a light British cruiser in the Mediterranean off Bardia, Libya, scoring two hits. The cruiser was said to be protecting British supply transports, presumably enroute to Tobruk.)

The Italian command also reported Italian bombers defied violent antiaircraft fire yesterday to make a daylight raid on the naval base of Valletta, Malta. Large-sized bombs caused fires there visible from the Sicilian coast, the bulletin said.

Schertzinger, Movie Director, Dies in Sleep

Hollywood, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Victor Schertzinger, 52, writer, composer and motion picture director, died in his sleep today of a heart attack.

Schertzinger's most popular song was "Marcheta," which sold more than four million copies. He also had been a popular concert violinist, having toured the world with John Philip Sousa's band as a soloist at the age of 10.

Schertzinger was born in Mahaway City, Pa., son of a Philadelphia jeweler and Pauline von Webber, at one time court violinist to Queen Victoria.

Schertzinger was the first man to write a musical score for a motion picture, the Thomas H. Ince film "Civilization." He was credited with many other movie "firsts." He directed the first technicolor production "Redskin," and brought opera music to the movies in his production of "One Night of Love," with Grace Moore as the star. He directed the first Charles Ray picture and also the first Rudolph Valentino film.

In recent years he directed scores of light comedies and musicals. Among his recent hits are "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," "The Road to Singapore," and "Birth of the Blues."

Not that they ever do, but if Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth should ever sound weary on their "Vox Pop" show which you hear over WJSV every Monday night at 8, you should know that it's because they've spent an exhausting day shopping.

And it's no ordinary shopping either. For their shopping tours take them to department stores, specialty shops, junk yards, fives and tens, hock shops, butcher shops, hardware stores—anywhere, in fact, where they're likely to find something that will cause a gasp of delight or else a laugh on "Vox Pop."

Time was when Parks and Wally used to give away money for each question correctly answered on the radio program. And then, several months ago they put on a show from Annapolis. It didn't seem right to offer the midshipmen money, so they conceived the idea of going out and buying a lot of presents, some of them strictly on the gag side to be sure, but a great many of them very fine useful and valuable things.

It worked so well that they've been doing it ever since for the benefit of both the participants on the program as well as the listening audience.

The presents range all the way from typewriters, radios, suitcases and such things to bales of hay, dolls and toy electric trains.

Union Mission Observes 57th Anniversary

Central Union Mission Sunday—marking the fifty-seventh anniversary of the founding of that church-supported institution—yesterday was celebrated with special services in local churches, including a mass meeting at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, Ga., former Methodist missionary in China, Japan, Czecho-Slovakia and other lands, addressed the services at Calvary and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Churches. Homer Rodeheaver, noted evangelist, spoke at National Baptist Memorial Church, and led the singing at the mass meeting, where the mission's glee club sang.

Alexandria L. Jones, superintendent of the Jerry McAuley Mission in New York City, was guest speaker at Waugh Methodist Church. Other speakers went to First Methodist and Metropolitan Presbyterian Church to tell of the work of city missions.

Participating in Central Union Mission Sunday were officers and executive committeemen of the International Union of Gospel Missions. Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of Central Union Mission, shared the speaking program at the mass meeting.

Children's Sins Laid to Parents By Evangelist

Parents are to blame if their children "go to the devil," Evangelist Gipsy Smith yesterday afternoon told 1500 at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. He spoke last night to 1500 others.

Addressing the afternoon revival service, where men were special guests, the Gipsy said "religion is a man's job" and called a father taking his child to church on Sunday a "sweet and noble sight."

"If I had my way," he said, "we'd have 'father and son Sunday' observed all year.

"I prayed my children into the kingdom," he said, adding "some of you haven't prayed with your children since they were born."

Assuring that "goodness is not weakness," the Gipsy told the congregation "not to build a mud hut when they can build a palace."

"Why turn up your nose at things that are worthwhile?" he asked.

"Don't think you can live your own life, and not affect your child," he said, "for what you are, your child will be."

Tonight's meeting—set for 7:30—will be observed as "Women's Night." The Gipsy will speak daily at that hour, Saturday excepted, and on Sunday at 4 and 7:30 p. m.

John H. Layne, D. C. Attorney, Is Dead at 60

Church Pays Tribute to Maj. Brown

Maj. Ernest W. Brown's contributions toward the religious and civic life of the Nation's Capital were formally recognized yesterday by the congregation of Congress Street Methodist Church, 1236 Thirty-first Street Northwest, Georgetown, where he has been active for several years.

Maj. Brown retires as police superintendent on Friday.

"In all the difficulties relating to the administration of his duties," said the Rev. Dorsey K. Sturgis, in his sermon, "he (Maj. Brown) has kept his chin up, his head high and has come through with colors flying."

Is Presented a Bible

He called Maj. Brown a "contradiction of the false philosophy" that one cannot hold a prominent public office of civic responsibility and still be true to his own Christian convictions.

Recalling Maj. Brown's interest in the Police Boys' Club, the clergyman said that his work and influence upon the boy-life of the city would not soon be forgotten, but "stand as a monument."

After Mr. Sturgis gave Maj. Brown a leather-bound Oxford Bible on behalf of the congregation, Retired Police Inspector William H. Harrison arose to pay tribute to Maj. Brown, recollecting that he "broke in" the police official as a "rookie" in Foggy Bottom many years ago.

Greetings from the Class

Inspector Harrison founded the Harrison Bible Class of Congress Street Church, a group composed mainly of police and firemen, and of which Maj. Brown is past president. Fred Stephens, class vice president, brought greetings from the class in the absence of Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, class president.

In a brief response, Maj. Brown said that the church's testimonial was one that he would never forget.

Maj. Brown in 1940 received the Washington Federation of Churches' plaque award for making the greatest laymen's contribution to the city's religious life.

29,000 Members Sought Today As Roll Call Draws to Close

A "whirlwind finish" today in which 29,000 members for the Red Cross will be sought chiefly in Government offices and business houses, will precede formal closing of the Silver Anniversary roll call tonight, it was announced yesterday.

The Red Cross is 29,000 short of its goal of 200,000 members. The quota was larger than usual because of the variety of calls on the organization due to international conditions.

Edgar Morris, general chairman, yesterday held conferences with some of the 15,000 workers who have been soliciting members, and announced that almost all the units engaged in the roll call had made their quotas. Many are still working to exceed their quotas and thus bring up the general total.

"Roll Call leaders," it was stated, "are placing their principal dependence for success on Monday in the Governmental unit and the general business unit. Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Maj. L. L. Gardner, vice chairman, and Mrs. Rosalie Wright, secretary, of the Governmental unit, are prepared for a whirlwind canvas of he Government agencies to speed up reports."

It was stated also that David E. McCoy, chairman; J. F. O'Donnell, vice chairman, and Mrs. Nina Dobbs, secretary, of the general business unit, are spending the weekend checking over the records of business houses of the city to obtain a few thousand more members for their unit.

Although the 200,000 goal has not been reached, Morris reported that workers are encouraged by the fact that already this year's Roll Call has exceeded the total memberships attained by the local chapter in any previous year.

Rites Tomorrow For Dr. Lynch, G. U. Instructor

The funeral of Dr. John J. Lynch, 43, of 2132 Wyoming Avenue Northwest, who died Saturday following a month's illness, will be tomorrow.

Requiem mass will be sung at 10 a. m. in St. Thomas the Apostle Church, 2661 Woodley Road Northwest, with the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy officiating. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Born in New Haven, Dr. Lynch came to Washington in 1918 and was graduated from Georgetown University Medical School in 1925. He was a member of the medical school faculty and of the Washington Gynecological, Georgetown Clinical, Kober and District Medical Societies.

He leaves his wife, Angela, and seven children, John J., jr., William, Thomas, Mary Margaret, Anne, Joseph and Kathryn.
